

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

MR. LUMLEY, Q.C., in his preface to the Sixth Edition of this work stated :—"The importance of the poor rate is not to be estimated by reference to its own object alone. It is the basis upon which most other parochial taxes are settled and charged ; it forms one of the subjects which constitute the qualifications for the enjoyment of parliamentary and municipal franchises ; and, in many cases, affords a test of qualification for offices.

"As it is applied, directly, in the raising of six or seven millions annually ; and, indirectly, in the raising of several millions of other local taxes (a), and of two or three millions of the property and income tax, too much attention cannot be given to the procuring of accuracy in the assessment, with reference both to substance and to form. The property rated ought to be correctly estimated, in regard to amount, and properly described in the assessment, while the party intended to be assessed should be clearly designated.

“The Act, which was introduced in 1837 by Mr. Poulett Scrope, therefore produced most beneficial results, in causing the proper mode of assessing property to this rate to be distinctly defined by the legislature, and in prescribing uniformity both in the mode of laying that assessment, and in setting it forth in form ; while a provision which was then much needed; for procuring the valuation of property, was supplied, under such restrictions as to prevent unnecessary or fruitless expense. At the same time it cannot be denied that it was mainly through the instrumentality of the machinery established by the Poor Law Amendment Act that the statute was carried into full effect.

“The Act, though relating to one subject, embraced three distinct provisions ; namely, the principle of assessment, the procuring of valuations, and the providing a less expensive mode of appeal than that previously in force. It appeared to the author of this Commentary when he first compiled it that it would be convenient to bring together the various matters which had occurred in relation to the statute during the seven years that it had then been in operation, and to show the interpretation which had been given to the language, the general object and purpose, and to the spirit of the Act; and, at the same time, to communicate many practical details, which were not then generally known, and could only be learned through the extended view which the peculiar constitution of the Poor Law Commission afforded. The course then prescribed has been followed in subsequent editions, and is still pursued in the present.

“The statute having been prefixed, the commentaries on the separate sections follow, in which the principles of the Act are explained, and practically applied to the several subject-matters of the assessment; the details which arose in reference to the process of the valuation and the map are fully discussed; and the proceedings attending the appeal and its costs, and the amending or quashing of the rate, are set forth.”

When the publishers entrusted me with the responsibility of editing a fresh edition of the late Mr. Lumley's Union Assessment Committee Acts, they at the same time, with a view to the publication of a new edition of his work on the Law of Parochial Assessments, requested me to revise the last edition, which was published in the year 1872, and to make the work conformable with the law as it now exists.

I accepted the task of editing new editions of Mr. Lumley's valuable works on the above mentioned subjects with hesitation, and with a full sense of the responsibility which attaches to one who followed him in a branch of the law, in regard to which he was, I may say, the recognized legal authority.

I have completed the revision of both works, and now place the present one before the public trusting that its high reputation as a reliable authority on the subject upon which it treats will be sustained in the future.

THE COMMENTARY.

COMMENTARY ON THE FIRST SECTION.

Object of
chial Assessment
Act.

THE alteration in the administration of the poor law effected by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, speedily drew attention to the irregular and unequal mode in which the poor rate was assessed in a great part of the country. The Parochial Assessment Act of 1836 was passed to remedy the many abuses and irregularities which prevailed in the imposition of this tax. No previous statute had defined the precise mode of assessing property to the poor rate, or had prescribed the form in which the rate was to be made, although the 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 13, required copies of all rates to be fairly entered in books, to be provided by the overseers. But the principle of the assessment of land had been established by numerous judicial authorities.

Poor rate,
how imposed by the statute

The statute 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, in general terms imposed the rate "upon every inhabitant, parson, vicar, and other, and upon every occupier of lands, houses, tithes impropriate, propriations of tithes, coal mines, or saleable underwoods." The charge was thereby imposed upon "the inhabitant" as such, and upon the "occupiers of lands." The former were assessable in respect of their personal property, but the subject-matter of the rate so far as it related to the second branch of the enactment, was the occupation of the different kinds of landed property therein enumerated. The consideration of the charge upon persons in respect of their personal estate having, for reasons to be stated hereafter, ceased to be of present practical importance, will be now relinquished, and attention will be directed to the charge upon the occupiers of real property. The occupation of the land must not be that of a mere licensee, as, where the owner of grass lands advertised a sale by auction for a period of ten months, one condition being that the purchaser should keep the fences in repair, and lay down manure, all taxes being paid up to the time of sale, and the owner to continue to pay such taxes,—the purchaser was held not to be the occupier, being only a licensee, but the owner was the occupier: Mogg v. Yatten, 45 J. P. 324. The tax being imposed upon the occupier of lands in respect of the occupation, it becomes necessary to ascertain the value of that occupation to the occupier. When the occupier is a tenant, and not the owner, it is easy to ascertain the value of that occupation, by reference to the sum paid for it. But it is not so easy to ascertain the value of the land when in the occupation of the owner. As, however, the value of every matter is ascertained by its exposure to sale in an open market, so the value of the occupation of land may be determined by ascertaining the sum of money which has been given by, or may be expected to be obtained from, any person who would, in the face of an open competition, agree to take and pay for the occupation of the land during some given period.

The sum which is, or would be, so paid for the occupation of the land, is the rent; and according as that sum is paid down at once, or in portions periodically, it represents the value of the occupation during the time stipulated for such occupation. As the assessment to the poor rate is made periodically, and upon the value of a periodical occupation, the rent will form a proper criterion of the value of the occupation of the land, if it represent the actual value of such occupation during the successive portions of that period. But if a sum in gross is paid at the commencement of a term, and a small sum is paid at successive or different periods during that term, for the occupation of the land, it would be improper to take this latter sum as the value of the land during the whole term, or at any particular time in that term. Again, if an amount have been stipulated to be paid during a long term of years, and circumstances cause the value of the occupation to be increased or lessened before that term shall have expired, the sum so agreed to be paid would not truly represent the value of the occupation of the land after such improvement or depreciation.

So, from peculiar circumstances or motives, the rent reserved even where no fine has been paid, may be below the actual value. The property may be low rented. In a case in the Court of Queen's Bench, BLACKBURN, J., pronounced this judgment:—"The legislature has stated that the estimate according to which the rate shall be calculated shall be, not the actual rental paid, but the rent at which the premises might have been reasonably expected to let from year to year. The rent actually paid is no doubt prima facie the estimate, but it is not conclusive. Here the premises might have been let at a larger sum than that demanded by the landlords, and the rate should have been calculated on that amount: Hayward, app., Overseers of Brinkworth, resps., 10 L. T. (N. S.) 609.

On the other hand, it has been considered that what is known as a fancy rent, being a rent paid for property which adjoins other property of the tenant, is not a correct criterion of the annual assessable value. Per Dr. LUSHINGTON:—"I am of opinion that the actual rent is not a safe test of the relative value of lands. The actual rent of a property may be affected by special circumstances quite independent of its value, e.g., by the character of the landlord according as he seeks a moderate and sure, or a high and uncertain return; the position of the tenant, who may be willing to give what is called a fancy rent for the property, as adjoining other lands which he uses or occupies; by the special terms of the agreement between the tenant and the landlord as to what shall be done or paid by them respectively; and by the extent of the property, it being notorious that small holdings generally let proportionately at a higher rate than larger ones do:—Edwards v. Hatton, Law R. 1 Eccl. R. 31; 12 L. T. (N. S.) 692.

Sometimes the annual assessable value, which is termed a rent, and is reserved upon a lease, is in fact a compensation for something more than the occupation of the land, and therefore cannot properly form the basis of the valuation. This has been shown in a case where a railway was, with all its incidental rights, privileges, and advantages, let on lease by one company to another at a fixed rent, and it was held that this rent could not be taken as conclusively determining the annual value of the railway, since many other matters were taken into consideration by the railway company hiring the line as an inducement to their agreeing to pay the rent: South Eastern Railway Company v. Dorking, 18 Jur. 678; 23 L. J. R. M. C. 85; 8 E. & B. 491; Reg. v. Eastern Counties Railway, 23 L. J. R. (N. S.) M. C. 96; 18 Jur. 679, n. Thus, a sum paid by way of rent by a railway company to guarantee a certain rate of profit to a canal company was not a criterion of the annual value of the canal: Reg. v. Overseers of Lapley, 9 B. & S. 568. Though where the rent represented the fair valuation at the time of the hiring, it was considered to represent the annual value of the property rented, though circumstances occurred to render the occupation of little or no value to the railway company before the expiration of this lease: Reg. v. Fletton, 3 L. T. (N. S.) 689; 3 E. & E. 450; 30 L. J. M. C. 89; 7 Jur. 518; 25 J. P. 100, confirmed by Reg. v. Lord Sherard, 33 L. J. M. C. 5; 33 L. T. 72. Where, however, circumstances occur which prevent the premises from being occupied for the purpose to which they were appropriated, the assessable value will not be estimated by the rent or by the rental value settled with reference to that purpose. Thus, factories which ceased to be workable as such by reason of the "cotton famine," were held not to be assessable at their value as when worked, though they were assessable as warehouses for the storing of machinery, where the same was kept in them: Reg. v. Overseers of Cas- tleton, 33 L. J. M. C. 178 ; 5 B. & S. 505 ; 10 L. T. (N. S.) 605 ; Harter, app., Overseers of Salford, respa., 34 L. J. M. C. 206 ; 6 B. & S. 591.

So also as regards blast furnaces "out of blast." If such a property were to be entirely abandoned as a blast furnace, and all the necessary machinery and material removed from the premises, the case would be like that of an empty house in the intervals of letting, and it would not be rateable ; but when the fires merely are blown out, and the property is so far disused as a blast furnace, it is still occupied as a store-place for the machinery or material, and, as such, is rateable according to its annual value as a store-place merely. It appears to be impossible to distinguish a blast furnace out of blast with the machinery or material on the premises, from the case of a closed mill in which the machinery is left, as in Stayley v. Castleton, and Harter v. Salford. It is, like the closed mill, kept up for the purpose of keeping the machinery together, and the question in both cases is precisely the same, namely, what the premises would let for to a hypothetical tenant, "who had the capacity to make such a use of them as could be made by a tenant."

As regards a furnace "out of blast" in order that repairs may be done, it is liable to be rated precisely as if it were in full work. In such a case the rent which a hypothetical tenant would have to pay would not be lessened because he stopped working the furnace whilst the repairs were being executed ; and there is no distinction between this description of property and any other manufactory or shop which is closed temporarily whilst repairs are being executed.

The fact that a future return of the means of working may be expected, does not affect the question, which depends on the state of the premises when it arises.

Hence, although the periodical payment of rent may be properly taken as generally affording a correct criterion of the periodical value, it cannot be taken as conclusively determining the annual value in all cases.

Value of land to be ascertained by
to a period.

The value of the periodical occupation is therefore ascertained by a suppositious estimate, which refers to the sum that would be paid for the occupation under ordinary and usual circumstances during the particular period, if the subject-matter occupied continued to be of the same intrinsic value. That period might be a day, a month, a year, or any number of years; but for almost all purposes of assessment the period of a year has been adopted, and the customary inquiry is, what is the value of the occupation for a year; or, in other words, what is the annual value?

The rate
posed according to
value.

According to the effect of the statute of Elizabeth, as established by the decisions above referred to, the assessment to the poor rate of the occupiers of land should be calculated upon the annual value of their occupation of the property rateable.

In the case of Rex v. Adames, 4 B. & Ad. 67, the Court of King's Bench laid down this principle, namely, "that the rate should be imposed according to some value of the subject-matter of the occupation. Usage and convenience have" (the court say) "established this value to be not that of the estate or property itself, but that of the profit which is or might be made from the estate or property;—and the rule has been to assess according to the annual profit of the land, or where the produce is not matured in one year, then upon an average of years; from which profit deductions are allowed for all the expenses necessary to its production."

"If the subject of occupation be of a perishable nature, or require an annual expense to secure its existence, an allowance ought to be made on this account, for the total annual profit is not the net annual profit; a part must be set aside for the restoration and maintenance of the subject of occupation. It is on this principle that buildings have been permitted to be rated at less in proportion than arable or other land."—"This rule of rating is established—All lands are to be assessed in proportion to the net rent which a tenant at rack-rent would pay, he discharging all rates, charges, and outgoings."

This decision was pronounced in 1832, yet there was so great a diversity in the application of the rules thus expressed by the court, that four years afterwards the statute now under consideration was passed.

The 1st section of that statute applies to the principle of the valuation, and declares that the rate shall be made "upon the estimate of the net annual value of

Will. 4,

the several hereditaments rated thereunto." The term net is here introduced, and imports something other than the meaning above given to the terms "annual value." Accordingly, the statute proceeds to define the meaning of the net annual value as follows: "that is to say, the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free from all usual tenants' rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge, if any, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain them in a state to command such rent."

The annual value of the premises is expressed by the first part of the clause, namely, the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free from all usual tenants' rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge. The subsequent matters introduced do not affect the value of the occupation, but the actual profit received by, or resulting to, the owner of the land, and so far affect what may be considered as the net annual value. These are the deductions for repairs and insurance.

All the large manufactories in manufacturing districts are, as a rule, in the occupation of the owners, and large manufactories are not built like ordinary house property as an investment or to let to tenants from year to year, therefore in practice a tenant of a large manufactory can hardly be found, and in order to estimate the annual value or the rent at which a manufactory might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, "a hypothetical tenant must be assumed," and as Mr. Justice WIGHTMAN said, "the terms of such tenancy are not difficult to be conceived, the occupying tenant must be assumed to pay adequate remuneration to a contractor for land and fixed capital vested therein. . . . And the local rateable value would be such a sum as would pay the rent of the land and profit on the fixed capital therein." And Mr. Justice BLACKBURN, in a case of the rating of a lighthouse, said, "It is for the sessions to say what would be fair rent to be given for the ground and fair interest on the expense of building the light-house." And the same learned judge decided that "the rent which would be paid by the hypothetical tenant must decide the value."

In the case of large mansions or castles, such as Chatsworth and Alnwick Castles, when in the occupation of the owners, a tenancy from year to year is too short a period of letting to be assumed, for it is clear that a tenant would not give so much on such a tenancy as if he got the mansion or castle on a seven years' lease; and as COCKBURN, C. J., in Clive v. Foy, said, "If you rated it on that principle you would rate it much below its value, which ought not to be done." (Hedley on Rating Mansion-Houses, p. 28.) But as property of this description is not built to let to ordinary tenants, and is not capable of yielding direct annual profit or rent, instead of assessing a tenancy the usual course is to assess the amount which the property would fetch in the market, and upon that to calculate the gross annual value at 3 per cent. upon the capital sum. So with regard to a public hospital, which is liable to be rated (London, Mayor of v. Stratton, L. R. 7 E. & I. App. 477), a hypothetical tenant must be assumed, for such a building under ordinary circumstances is not capable of being let to a tenant, and the value for purposes of local taxation would be the rent of the land and adequate remuneration for the fixed capital invested in the building (Reg. v. West Middlesex Waterworks Co., 28 L. J. M. C. 185). So also with regard to a lighthouse attached to a dock for the purposes of the dock, the value of the occupation would be a fair rent for the ground on which it stands, and fair interest on the expense of building the lighthouse (Blythe Harbour and Dock Co. v. Tynemouth, Glen's Poor Law Statutes, Vol. I., p. 41).

Why the taxes and tithe rent-charge to be deducted.

The taxes payable by a tenant in respect of his occupation do not render that occupation intrinsically less valuable, but they may perhaps prevent him from paying so much rent as he would do if no such taxes were payable. The tithe rentcharge is substituted for a claim on the part of the tithe-owner to a portion of the produce when raised, and is the subject of a separate assessment in the hands of such tithe-owner; but the occupier, who is liable to that demand, will give less rent for the occupation of the land than he would do if no such demand could be made.

Inasmuch, therefore, as those charges in fact diminish the rent, the value of the land to the owner is thereby lessened. As, however, the tithe rent-charge is rated in the hands of the tithe-owner, the whole value of the land in reference to the assessment is not diminished by that charge, though there is a division of the parties who are to be assessed.

Nevertheless, there appears to be an error in the present state of the law. The tithe formerly was part of the produce of the land. Hence, a rate upon the tithe was a rate upon the produce, which in itself represents not only the occupation of the land, but also the capital and labour spent upon the land; so that, while the farmer is only assessable upon the occupation of the land, the tithe-owner is assessable upon that which represents such occupation, and also the capital employed upon it. That capital is not, however, laid out by the tithe-owner, and his rentcharge has been fixed and settled with reference to the consideration of his having to pay the assessments upon that rent. A commutation of tithe, calculated with reference to a future exemption from rates and taxes, would have been more correct in principle, and more satisfactory to the tithe-owners. This course has been occasionally pursued wherever tithes have been commuted under local Acts, the construction whereof depends upon their particular language. See Chatfield v. Ruston, 3 B. & C. 363; Mitchell v. Fordham, 6 B. & C. 274; and Reg. v. Shaw, 12 Q. B. 419; 17 L. J. R. M. C. 137.

The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 1, enables such commutations under local Acts (which are there termed corn rents) to be converted into rentcharges, but renders such charges free from parochial rates and taxes, where the previous corn rents were free and exempt.

If the owner who occupies his own land is required to pay taxes or tithe rentcharge in respect of his occupation, the value of the land to him is so far diminished.

Tithe-free
land.

Where land is tithe-free, no deduction upon this head is to be made, as the statute only provides for the allowance of tithe rentcharge (if any); but the value of the land to be assessed in this case is the greater to the occupier in consequence of the exemption, and the amount of his rate is greater than that of his neighbours who occupy tithable lands, and hence no difference will exist in the general valuation of all the property in the parish.

other deductions
made.

It might be said that the deduction of "the probable average annual costs of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain the premises in a state to command the rent estimated as the annual value," is a positive provision of the legislature, and that it is not necessary to seek any explanation of the principle of the law. Nevertheless, the provision itself is supported by the doctrine of the court, expressed in the case of Rex v. Adames, above cited, and by reasons of weight.

Repairs.

First. As regards the deduction for repairs. It must be observed, that the value of the occupation of the lands is taken upon an estimate deduced from the supposed value during several years (though it is expressed in the terms "from year to year"), and it is presumed that this estimate would be correct for several years to come. If, then, the subject of the valuation be buildings, canals, or railways, which deteriorate with every year's occupation and use, unless properly sustained and repaired, it is manifest that the estimate would speedily become incorrect. It is, however, presumed that the owner or occupier will not suffer that deterioration to take place, but will cause such amount of repairs to be annually expended upon the premises as will keep them in the same condition as when the estimate of the value is first taken. A probable future outlay cannot in strictness be considered as affecting the present value of the property, but it is necessary to be considered when an estimate is formed of a prospective value during some period which is to come.

Secondly. As to the insurance. The insurance of ^{And insurance.} property is but a precautionary measure against a remote contingency. It is an act of prudence on the part of the insured, which does not affect the value of the property at the particular time of the estimate. Yet, as the estimate is formed for a prospective period, during which time the property may be destroyed by fire, it is thought right to allow for an outlay which would be the means of restoring the property so destroyed, and which most men of ordinary prudence at the present time incur. Hence, an allowance for insurance is to be made, whether that insurance be or be not in fact effected.

The insurance may be paid by the landlord or the tenant; nevertheless, the occupier is entitled to the deduction, because it must be assumed that he recoups the landlord for the expenditure in the rent.

Other
expenses.

Thirdly. As to the other expenses. These are not expressed, but their nature is described, and it will be seen that they must correspond with the subject of deductions already named, though the Court of Queen's Bench on one occasion gave a peculiar signification to these words with reference to the valuation of the tithe rentcharge. According to the language of the statute, they must be such as may be necessary to maintain the tenement in a state to command the estimated rent, but that court then interpreted these words in a manner not strictly in accordance with their literal meaning, which interpretation has since, however, been repudiated.

The subject of the deductions, however, will be pursued more at length hereafter.

Meaning
of the terms gross estimated rental in

Although the legislature thus defined, in the 1st section, the net annual value which was to be the subject of the rate, in sect. 2 reference is made to the gross estimated rental in regard to the rate on compound hereditaments; and in the form of the rate given in the schedule there is a column for the gross estimated rental. Of this term no definition or explanation was given, either in that statute or elsewhere. The meaning of the word rental is not clearly ascertained, and it is manifest that it is not properly applicable in this statute, in which apparently the better term would have been value.

Upon the passing of the Act, however, the Poor Law Commissioners expressed their opinion upon the meaning of the statute by giving definitions of gross rent and net rent.

Gross rent they defined in their circular letter, dated 22nd June, 1837, to be "the rent which would be paid to a landlord, who himself undertakes to pay all the usual tenant's rates and taxes with which the hereditaments or premises rented by the tenant are chargeable, together with tithe commutation rentcharge, the expense of upholding the buildings in tenantable repair, insurance against loss by fire, and any other expenses (if any shall exist) necessary to maintain such hereditaments in a state to command such gross rent." "See their 3rd Ann. Rep., p. 22. ^{Gross rent defined.}

Net rent they defined to be "the amount which is received by, or which remains clear in the hands of a landlord after all such taxes, charges, and expenses as are above enumerated shall have been provided for." ^{Net rent defined.}

In the above-cited case of Rex v. Adames, the Court of Queen's Bench laid down the doctrine that the rate was to be laid on the net annual profit.

Experience shows that there are three classes of cases upon this subject, in respect of the relation between the landlord and the tenant. ^{Three classes of cases.}

1. The landlord may agree to pay all the tenant's rates and taxes chargeable upon the premises, to repair the same, and to insure the property.

2. The landlord may agree to repair and insure; leaving the tenant to pay the tenant's rates and taxes.

3. The landlord may require his tenant to repair and insure, as well as to pay all the rates and taxes levied on the latter.

In the first case, the landlord receives more than the annual value of the land; he receives a sum in respect of the rates and taxes which the tenant ought to pay, and consequently, in any estimate of the value of the present occupation, formed upon the basis of the rent so paid, the amount of those rates and taxes ought to be deducted.

In the second case, the rent paid is a proper representative of the annual value.

In the third case, the rent paid is less than the annual value of the occupation of the land; inasmuch as the tenant undertakes part of the charge that properly falls upon the landlord, namely, the repairs and insurance, and consequently what he pays as the rent is only a part of the sum paid for the occupation.

This is shown by the following illustration:—Suppose a landlord lets a house in good repair for a year at a certain sum, the tenant being only bound to occupy it with ordinary care, and not being under covenant to leave it in complete repair, that sum represents the value of the occupation to the tenant. At the end of the year the house may be found to be damaged by the year's reasonable use and occupation, and out of the rent then paid the landlord must expend the requisite amount to render it fit for another tenant. But if, besides paying a sum for rent, the tenant undertake to keep in repair during the term, it is obvious that the rent so paid is less than the annual value of the occupation, because the tenant not only pays that rent, but lays out an additional sum of money in repairs.

But as to obtain that which the statute calls the net annual value, the amount of the repairs and the insurance must be deducted from the gross rent, the rent paid in the third case would upon the supposition that it has been adjusted according to all due proportions, be the net annual value contemplated by the statute, being the clear profit in the hands of the landlord.

How to obtain the net annual value.

It seems, therefore, in this view of the statute, that to obtain the gross rental the intrinsic value of the tenant's occupation of the land must be estimated; to this must be added the amount of tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge, which must be considered as his liabilities, together with a probable estimate for repairs and insurance, which are the landlord's liabilities. The aggregate would be the gross rental, or, as it should have been termed, the gross annual value.

And the gross rental

Again, to obtain the net annual value, from this gross rental must be deducted the tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge, and the probable estimate for repairs and insurance.

Illustration of the principles. The following calculations illustrate the observations which have been made :—

If the tenant pays—

In rent	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	£75
In rates, taxes, and commutation tithe rent	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	10
For repairs	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	5
And for insurance	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	1

If from this sum of 91*l.*, the several sums of 10*l.*, 5*l.*, and 1*l.* be deducted, the result will be 75*l.*, the net annual value, being the sum which in this case is paid to the landlord.

Again, suppose (the landlord covenanting to pay for repairs 5*l.*, and insurance 1*l.*) the } £81 tenant pays in rent - - - - }
In rates, taxes, and tithes - - - - 10

The gross rental will be - - - - £91

But in like manner the taxes, the repairs, and } 16 insurance are to be deducted - - - - }

And the net annual value will be - - - - £75

Lastly. Suppose the tenant to pay 91*l.* as gross rent, paying no other charge whatever, and the landlord pays for rates and tithes 10*l.*, for repairs 5*l.*, for insurance 1*l.*, the net annual value to the latter will be 75*l.*

Indeed, with reference to the assessment, it is immaterial how these different charges are distributed between the landlord and the tenant, as they are all to be taken into consideration in determining the assessable value in accordance with this statute.

This view of the statute, which had been expressed by the Poor Law Commissioners in the letter above referred to, afterwards in their circular letter of September 16, 1840, upon the rating of tithe, and in their general report upon local taxation published in 1840, was maintained by them for a long series of years. But in 1859 the Poor Law Board were led to doubt the accuracy of the previous exposition, and deemed it right to consult the then law officers of the Crown, and Mr. Tomlinson, as to the proper meaning of the term, "gross estimated rental," in this statute. Those counsel gave their advice in the following terms:—
"We understand by gross estimated rental, the rent at which the property might be expected to be let, free of tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge, the tenant taking these burthens upon himself; and we suppose that in practice the column is usually filled up, so far as regards corporeal hereditaments, with figures expressing, or approximating to the conventional or rack-rent on a tenancy from year to year. After making the deduction therefrom of average repairs, &c., the rateable value of such property is arrived at."

This opinion the Poor Law Board circulated in a letter dated May 9, 1859, addressed to the churchwardens and overseers of all the parishes in England and Wales.

It will be seen that in this explanation there is an interpolation of the words, "the tenant taking these burthens (i.e., the rates, taxes, and tithe rentcharge) upon himself," so that the statute is read as if the words "subject to" had been inserted in the clause for "free of."

Again, reference is made to "the conventional or rack-rent." But there is no legal definition of these words, neither can it be said that there is any settled popular meaning thereof. The term "conventional" is certainly not a word commonly used, and, as to "rack-rent," the only meaning thereof (generally recognized) is a rent approximating to the real annual value as distinguished from a ground or quit rent, which words signify little more than an acknowledgment of tenancy. The words "rack-rent" are indeed used in the Property Tax Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 32, without any specific explanation, though some definite rules are laid down for obtaining the net annual value of property assessable under that Act. A definition of the term "rack-rent" is also given in the Public Health Act, 1875, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 4.

The result of the explanation given in this latter circular letter appears to be this, that before entering the sum in the column for the gross estimated rental, there must be a deduction in respect of the rates and taxes ; so that where the tenant pays the full rent, and also the rates and taxes, the sum paid as the rent is to be inserted, but where the tenant pays a certain rent, and the landlord pays the taxes, the amount paid for the latter is to be deducted from the sum paid for the rent, and the balance is to be entered in the column for the gross estimated rental.

On a careful consideration of the subject, it will be seen, that, whichever course be adopted, the net rateable value will be the same. According to the circular letters of the Poor Law Commissioners, the net rent, the taxes, and the repairs, are all to be added together to form the gross estimated rental, and the taxes and the repairs are to be deducted to give the rateable value. But, according to the later circular of the Poor Law Board, the rates and taxes will not be estimated at all on either side, so that it will only be necessary to deduct the cost of the repairs from the gross estimated rental to elicit the net rateable value.

In the rating of ordinary house property, and farms or land occupied under distinct rents, no difficulty need arise whichever rule be acted upon. But in regard to rateable properties, of which the annual value can only be ascertained from calculation of the actual receipts or earnings, where gross sums are to be dealt with and reduced by numerous items of deductions, the specific charges for the rates and taxes must be taken into the consideration, and must appear in the calculations, though, as regards them, it will be immaterial whether the amount appear in the column for the gross estimated rental or not.

In all the cases which have come before the courts since the statute involving questions as to the deductions to be allowed in the rating of railways, canals, and similar properties, and in the rating of the tithe rentcharge, deductions have been allowed in respect of rates and taxes.

earnings entered as

It is right to notice that in many parishes the gross earnings or annual returns in the parish of railways and canals are stated as the gross estimated rental. The overseers or the assessment committees do not profess to know how else to ascertain this rental, and feel that the accurate statement is immaterial so long as they ascertain the net rateable value. But this statement causes certain errors to exist in some statistical returns.

mated

It is now necessary to observe, that the Act 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 15, has supplied the deficiency above adverted to, and has given a definition of gross estimated rental. It enacts thus:—"The gross estimated rental for the purpose of the schedule to that Act shall be the rent at which the hereditaments might reasonably be expected to let from year to year free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge if any."

And then there follows a proviso, "that nothing therein contained shall repeal or interfere with the provisions contained in the 1st section of the said Act (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96), defining the net annual value of the hereditaments to be rated."

This definition is, in fact, a repetition of that part of the definition in the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, which, it was supposed, contained the explanation of "gross estimated rental." As, unfortunately, the language is the same, there is the same ambiguity in the meaning as previously existed. The legislature, though, as it must be presumed, aware of the doubt as to the meaning of the words "free of," nevertheless repeated them.

But the explanations already detailed, which had been given upon the previous statute, may reasonably be applied to the present clause, so that no misconstruction need arise in consequence of the repetition of the language.

It must, however, be admitted that there is ground for argument that the language of both statutes is to be construed according to the literal meaning, and that the proper estimate of the "gross estimated rental" is the rent which the tenant would give if he had no rates and taxes to pay, i.e., if his tenement were free from them. Such a construction would, of course, make the basis of the assessment higher than that which is exhibited by the construction previously explained, because neither statute authorizes in terms the deduction of the rates and taxes or the tithe rentcharge. As regards the rates and taxes, it might be said, that it is indifferent whether they be or be not deducted; but that observation fails in regard to the tithe rentcharge, because the law has expressly provided that it shall be assessed in the name of the tithe-owner. If, therefore, it is not deducted in the estimate of the rateable value of the farmer's occupation, it must be assessed to the poor rate twice. This affords a strong reason for giving a forced construction to the language ; and, though the question has never come properly and distinctly before the court for their decision, it has been incidentally the subject of judicial inquiry.

In the discussion upon the cases relating to the parliamentary franchise before the Court of Common Pleas, where it has been sought to ascertain the meaning of the term clear yearly value, reference has been made to this statute, and in the judgment there it is said, that the "rateable value of property has generally been considered that which it would fairly let for, the tenant bearing all such public burthens as attach to his occupation, and in consequence of disputes as to the principal upon which properties more or less perishable should be rated, the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, was passed, and that statute prescribed the mode of ascertaining the rateable value of all kinds of property ; viz., that it should be the net annual value left after making certain deductions specified in the Act from the rent which would be obtained for it." Per TINDAL, C. J., in Colville, app., Wood, resp., 2 M. G. & S. 216. See also Coogan, app., Luckett, resp., Ib. 182.

In Reg. v. Hall Dare, 5 B. & S. 796 ; 11 L. T. (N. S) 301 ; 34 L. J. M. C. 17, SHEE, J., says, "I understand the words 'free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rent charge, if any,' as meaning 'without regard to,' or 'putting aside,' all tenant's rates and taxes which fall on the tenant and tithe commutation rentcharge ; and then are to be deducted the average annual cost of repairs and insurance which the landlord must pay, unless there be an agreement with the tenant otherwise, as well as all other expenses necessarily incurred by the landlord in order to enable the property to command the assumed rent." This, however, only applies to the rateable value, and not to the gross estimated rental.

In the Act for assessing the metropolis, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, s. 4, are given the definitions of the words "gross value" and "rateable value" as follows:—

"Gross value means the annual rent which a tenant might reasonably be expected, taking one year with another, to pay for an hereditament, if the tenant undertook to pay all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and tithe commutation rentcharge (if any), and if the landlord undertook to bear the cost of the repairs and insurance, and the other expenses (if any) necessary to maintain the hereditament in a state to command that rent.

"Rateable value means the gross value after deducting therefrom the probable annual average cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses as aforesaid."

This is a statutory elucidation of the meaning of the terms now under consideration.

These remarks arise upon the general principle of ^{Practical} rating property expressed in the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, ^{remarks} on the ap-

of the sta-

c. 96 ; but the following remarks further illustrate the principles of rating :—

In practice, the owners of farms fence and drain the land, build the farm house and buildings necessary for cultivating or working the land, and let the land and buildings together at one rent, and which rent, if the farm is bonâ fide let from year to year, is taken as “the amount from which, by the statute, the rateable value is to be arrived at.”

And “if a man have a bit of land, and build a house upon it, the occupier will be rateable at the rent at which the house and land would let together.”

And “if a man has a house which to-day is let for £30 a year, and by converting it into a shop it would, as a shop, let for £60 a year, it is rateable, on its being converted into a shop, at £60.”

And if a man “erect an engine in a house, and the house and engine together would let at a greater rent, the house is rateable as enhanced in value by the engine.”

And “it is immaterial whether such improvements or additions be made by the owner or the occupier, the occupier is rateable on the improved value.”

And hereditaments are rateable, without reference “to the profits which may or may not be derived by the occupier,” and “a party holding property, in its nature rateable, is not discharged from his legal liability because he does it at a loss,” and “there is a fallacy in confounding the rateable value to the poor rate, with the remunerative value to the occupier."

Two farmers may occupy adjoining farms of equal value, the one may farm at a loss, the other at a profit, but the rateable value of the farms is the same.

Two tradesmen may occupy adjoining shops of equal value, the one may make a fortune, the other become bankrupt, but the value of the two shops are not affected by the success of the one or the failure of the other.

So, also, two manufacturers in the same street, carrying on the same kind of business, one makes an annual profit of £2,000, the other, a profit of £1,000: that circumstance, if the respective buildings do not differ in size, etc., cannot render the one liable to be assessed to the rates for the relief of the poor at a higher rate than the other, although each would be assessed to the imperial taxes on the amount of profits they actually made.

And so it is with coal and ironstone mines, the minerals, like the farms, shops, or warehouses, have local ascertained values, and they must be rated to the relief of the poor on these values, irrespective of the profits which may or may not be derived by the occupiers. The profits to be derived from coal and ironstone mines are like other things, largely dependent upon the skill and ability with which they are worked, and their rateability cannot be measured by the greater or less degree of success with which they are managed.

Whether there is any occupation of land.

A preliminary inquiry sometimes arises as to whether there is any occupation of the land or premises. This land or premises must be actually occupied by the person proposed to be assessed, for actual occupation irrespective of title is the only circumstance which determines rateability to the poor rate. Kittow v. Liskeard. 31 L. T. (N. S.) 601; L. R. 10 Q. B. 7; 39 J. P. 325; 44 L. J. M. C. 23.

The principle of occupation and non-occupation with reference to rateability may thus be stated:—

1. If premises (whatever they may consist of) be “in hand,” and the owner does not seek for a tenant, does not personally occupy them, and will not let them to an offering tenant, or keeps them as a “show place,” then he himself, as owner, occupies the premises, and is liable to be rated for them.

2. If the premises are in hand to let, and the owner does all he can to get a tenant but does not succeed, then the premises are unoccupied, and the owner is not rateable for them.

3. Where premises from whatever cause are practically unlettable, they are not rateable, being incapable of having an occupier.

4. The rateability of any property depends upon whether it has a potentiality of a beneficial occupation, and if it be a bridge or road from which no profit is or can be derived, it is not rateable.

If a person have only a license to use the premises for some purpose without excluding another from occupation, or has only a license or a right to exercise some privilege or to possess some enjoyment in the same, he is not such an occupier as will render him subject to the assessment. Hence, the occupier of furnished lodgings: Watkins v. Milton, L. R. 3 Q. B. 357, or of refreshment rooms at an exhibition: Morrish, app., Hall, resp., 32 L. J. M. C. 245, is not liable to be rated. A right of one railway company to use a station belonging to another railway company, which the latter also occupies, does not render the former liable to be assessed as an occupier of this station: Reg. v. Lord Sherard, 33 L. J. M. C. 5. But separate properties in one occupation may be rated at their separate value to a tenant, although that value is enhanced by the proximity of the premises to other premises in the same occupation which are a losing concern: Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Birkenhead, 29 L. T. (N. S.) 27; 42 L. J. M. C. 141; L. R. 8 Q. B. 745.

A person to whom dock accommodation, with user of sheds, quay, space, &c., was allotted, but who had not the exclusive possession of the same, was held not rateable; but the docks board were, as they had not parted with the exclusive possession: Allan v. Liverpool; Truman v. West Derby and Kirkdale, L. R. 9 Q. B. 180; 43 L. J. M. C. 69; 38 J. P. 261; 30 L. T. (N. S.) 93.

The owner of a private box at a theatre demised for a long term of years with a grant of an exclusive right to occupy the box and a small room adjoining whenever any performances take place, and a private entrance to the same in connection with other private boxes was held to be an occupier: Reg. v. St. Martin in the Fields, 11 L. J. M. C. 412; 3 Q. B. 204; 6 J. P. 656; and so were the occupants of apartments in royal palaces: Reg. v. Lady Ponsonby, 11 L. J. M. C. 65. Coprolite workings (though peculiar) constitute an assessable occupation: Roads v. Trumpington, 40 L. J. M. C. 35; L. R. 6 Q. B. 56; 23 L. T. (N.S.) 821. The National Rifle Association were held not rateable for the area of the common land, which they railed in, as they had no exclusive occupation of it, but they were rateable for the store shed which they used for their own purposes: Mildmay v. Wimbledon, 41 L. J. M. C. 133; 27 L. T. (N. S.) 265.

A license in the nature of an easement to erect advertising hoardings upon land in the possession of the licensee does not create in the licensee an occupation of the soil as to render him liable to be rated in respect of the hoardings. To constitute an occupation of land within the meaning of the Rating Acts by a person erecting hoardings on the premises of another, there must be either a demise to him of the soil on which the hoardings rest, or they must be permanently attached to the soil as a fixture, and give the actual and exclusive possession of such soil to him: Reg. v. St. Pancras Assessment Committee, 46 L. J. M. C. 243; L. R. 2 Q. B. D. 581; 41 J. P. 403; S. C. 27 L. T. (N. S.) 126.

This point being settled, many matters connected with the occupation require to be noted.

First. It is to be observed, that though ordinarily the surface of land and the superstructures upon it are the subjects of assessment, there is no such absolute limitation thereof. Thus there may be an occupation under the surface, as in the case of water or gas works, where the pipes conveying the fluid or vapour lie in the ground, or in that of a tunnel, subway, or underground railway. In all these cases there is a subject for rating though it is below the surface. And where there is an increased value given owing to an extension of the system of supply by reason of the connection of water mains with premises, that would constitute an alteration in the value, so as to increase the value in a supplemental valuation list : New River Company v. Islington Assessment Committee, 40 L. T. (N. S.) 322; L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 309; 43 J. P. 349. But a public sewer which is under the surface is not rateable, because no profit is made from the sewage : Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 9 B. & S. 739; L. R. 4 Q. B. 15; 19 L. T. (N. S.) 348 : Metropolitan Board of Works, app., West Ham, resp., L. R. 6 Q. B. 193; 40 L. J. M. C. 15; 23 L. T. (N. S.) 490; 35 J. P. 250.

So also there may be an occupation above the surface, as in the case of bridges, which, though generally resting upon piers, are assessable in respect of the occupation by the arches above those piers.

Another apt illustration has occurred in the electric telegraph, which was held rateable in respect of the wires which are stretched in the air, but nevertheless, in such manner occupy the land above and over which they are hung : The Electric Telegraph Company v. The Overseers of Salford, 19 Jur. 733 ; 24 L. J. (N.S.) M. C. 146.

Separate

Separate chambers, as in the inns of courts, and suites of apartments, as the flats in the new class of buildings in the metropolis, are rated distinctly, though they are sometimes only connected with the surface of the earth by a common staircase : Reg. v. Assessment Committee of St. George's Union, L. R. 7 Q. B. 90 ; 41 L. J. (N.S.) M. C. 30 ; 25 L. T. (N.S.) 696.

Statute

c. 102, s. 7.

The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 7, noticed hereafter, which has taken away the power of rating the owners of dwelling-houses or tenements in parliamentary boroughs, provided that "where the dwelling-house or tenement shall be wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated, the owner of such dwelling-house or tenement shall be rated in respect thereof to the poor rate." The precise meaning of the words "not separately rated" has not been determined ; but it was held in Stamper v. The Overseers of Sunderland, L. R. 3 C. P. 388 ; 37 L. J. M. C. 137 ; 18 L. T. (N.S.) 682, that where several persons occupied separate rooms in a dwelling-house, and had the use in common of the street-door, passage, staircase, and domestic conveniences, the landlord was the proper person to be rated, though he did not occupy any part of the premises nor retain any control over the tenants.

There may be also an occupation of land covered with water, where in some sense the water is occupied, as in the case of a dock or of a floating pier, which is nevertheless made a fixture to the land over which, or against which, the water flows. So, a watercourse used for manufacturing or mining purposes is rateable: Talargoch Lead Mining Company, app., v. St. Asaph Union, resp., L. R. 3 Q. B. 478; 18 L. T. (N. S.) 711.

Projections under the sea are assessable so long as they can be considered as included within the ambit of a parish. Such ambit included the shore to high watermark, but generally would not extend beyond low watermark. As to the space between high and low watermark, no precise rule had been laid down; but the fact whether that space was within the parish or not, was to be ascertained from usage or reputation, though primâ facie, it was not within the parish: Reg. v. Masson, 22 Jur. 111; 27 L. J. M. C. 100; 8 A. & E. 900; Ipswich Dock Commissioners v. St. Peter, Ipswich, 7 B. & S. 310. In Reg. v. Gee, 1 E. & E. 1068, it was held that where the sea shore forms the boundary of a parish, the portion of the shore between the high watermark of ordinary spring tides and that of the medium tides is within the limits of the parish. As regards navigable rivers which run between two parishes, the middle of the stream is primâ facie, the boundary of each parish for the purpose of rating: McGannon v. Sinclair, 28 L. J. M. C. 237; 33 L. T. (N. S.) 221.

This has been settled by the statute 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 27, which has enacted that "every accretion from the sea, whether natural or artificial, and the part of the sea-shore to the low watermark, and the bank of every river to the middle of the stream, which on the 25th December, 1868, was not included within the boundaries of or annexed to and incorporated with any parish, shall, for all civil parochial purposes, be annexed to and incorporated with the parish to which such accretion, part, or bank adjoins, in proportion to the extent of the common boundary." As the sea-shore beyond high watermark is not rateable, works erected for the purpose of rendering an arm of the sea navigable, though maintained by the tolls paid by vessels entering the channel, were held to be not rateable: Commissioners of Faversham Navigation v. Faversham Union, 31 J. P. 822. So, works to improve an estuary, or the passage of the sea into a dock or harbour, or the entrance to a navigable river, in respect whereof tolls were paid, but not for the private benefit of any one, were not assessable on account of the receipt of such tolls: Shoreham Harbour Commissioners v. Lancing, 39 L. J. M. C. 121; L. R. 5 Q. B. 489. The portion of a pier built upon piles below low watermark, and which is therefore beyond the realm of England, is neither an accretion from the sea nor an extra-parochial place within the meaning of the 27th section of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122. But quære if the pier had been built of solid masonry: Blackford Pier Company v. Fylde Union, 36 L. T. (N. S.) 251; 46 L. J. M. C. 189; 41 J. P. 344.

Derricks attached to the soil under a navigable river by moorings, were held by the Court of Appeal to be rateable to the poor rates, for they exclusively occupy a part of the river, because an exclusive occupation is the foundation of rating: Cory v. Bristow, 40 J. P. 308; L. R. 1 C. P. D. Ca. 54; L. J. Q. B. 168; 33 L. T. (N. S.) 624. And this judgment of the Court of Appeal was affirmed by the House of Lords on appeal from the decision of the Court of Appeal. This rule would be the same as to rating a floating dock attached to the soil or bed of a river in like manner as a derrick so attached: Ib. W. N. 1877, p. 47; 36 L. T. (N. S.) 594; L. R. 2 H. L. Ca. 262.

Secondly. In estimating the rent at which the property is presumed to be let, reference must be made to the value of the premises in their peculiar situation or condition; so that even an accidental value, whether temporary or permanent, arising from the particular purpose to which the premises may be adapted, or from advantage of position, mode of occupation or otherwise, must be taken into the calculation, if the advantages enable the owner to let them at a higher rent than they would fetch but for these advantages; Rex v. The Proprietors of the Liverpool Exchange, 1 A. & E. 465. Hence, public-houses, shops, warehouses, situated in a particular spot, may be of more value than other premises in the same locality. Fancy rents, paid for peculiar objects by particular individuals, are not, according to the ruling in Reg. v. Llantrissant, 20 L. T. 364; 38 L. J. M. C. 93; L. R. 4 Q. B. 334; 10 B. & S. 328, to form the proper basis of value. It is not, however, easy to follow out this ruling to its extreme result.

Various illustrations might be produced, but one of the cases before the courts has been that of a railway.

The company in general are the owners of the railway, having station-houses, engine-houses, warehouses, and various similar properties at the termini of the line, and at intermediate stations. These are their exclusive property, and by means of these premises they can carry on the traffic upon the line with the greatest advantage. The great question which arose in regard to the rating of these railways, was how to ascertain the rental. If only the line itself were considered, and it were asked what would a tenant give to rent the mere line independent of the collateral premises, the sum would be comparatively very small. It was urged in the earliest case in the Court of Queen's Bench, however, that this was the proper criterion. The court decided it was not; that to estimate the value of the premises, it must not be neglected that the party occupying them had those collateral advantages; and consequently, the proper inquiry was, as to the value of the railway having, at its termini and intermediate stations, proper station-houses and warehouses and the means of conducting traffic on it with the greatest prospect of profit: Reg. v. South Western Railway Company, 1 A. & E. (N. s.) 55; S. C. 2 Lum. P. L. C. 85.

Under the powers of an Act of parliament, a railway was constructed from G. to C. for the common purposes of the Great Western Company, and the Midland Company, each paying half the cost; on the completion, the half of the railway nearest G. became the sole property of the Midland Company, and the half nearest to C. the sole property of the Great Western Company, each company was bound to keep its own half in repair, and supply the staff of officials, &c., necessary on that half for the traffic of both companies. The railway was constructed for broad and narrow gauge traffic, with three rails on each line; and in practice the Great Western Company used the broad gauge and the Midland Company the narrow, so that of the three rails one was used in common, and one exclusively by each company. The traffic of the Midland Company far exceeded that of the Great Western Company. Upon this state of circumstances, it was held, that there was no rateable occupation by the Midland Company of the Great Western Company's half of the railway, but only an easement, and that the Midland Company were, therefore, not rateable to the poor rate of a parish through which that half of the railway passed; and semble, that the Great Western Company were rateable for their half of the railway in respect of the value of the occupation as enhanced by the profits made over it by the Midland: Midland Railway Company v. Badgworth, 34 L. J. M. C. 25; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 14; S. C. Reg. v. Midland Railway Company, 11 L. T. (N.S.) 303.

By agreement between a railway company and the C. C. company, the latter, in consideration of the railway company permitting them "to occupy and use a stable for the accommodation of four horses (at or near the C. station of the railway company), undertook and agreed that they would pay the railway company the clear monthly rent or sum of £1 5s., without any deduction (property tax excepted) and undertook and agreed, so long as they should occupy and use the stable, to observe, perform, and be bound by the bye-laws, rules, and regulations which should for the time being be issued or prescribed by the railway company for the government and use of their railway stations, premises, and conveniences, and further undertook and agreed to quit and deliver up possession of the stable at the expiration of one month after notice in writing," &c. The stable and the road approaching it were within the station and premises of the railway company. The railway company did not, in point of fact, exercise any control over or use the stables during the currency of the agreement, and none of the bye-laws and regulations mentioned in the agreement were material with regard to occupation of the stable; under these circumstances, the railway company were held liable to be rated to the poor rate in respect of the stable, as they remained in occupation of it notwithstanding the agreement: London and North Western Railway Company v. Buckmaster, 44 L. J. M. C. 29; L. R. 10 Q. B. 70; 31 L. T. (N. S.) 835; affirmed on appeal, 33 L. T. (N. S.) 329.

The inquiry as to the relative values of trunks and branch lines of railways will be considered hereafter.

At the same time it must be remarked that the assessment upon the stations and buildings themselves may be and generally is distinct and separate from that upon what constitutes the line itself: South Wales Railway v. The Swansea Local Board of Health, 4 E. & B. 199.

Where a railway company had about a mile and a half of their railway and a station, with a station-master's house, a tank and pumping machine, and a yard for coal and trucks, and were rated upon the value, not only of the station and premises, but also of the permanent way; upon appeal against the rate, it was held, that the permanent way could not be said to be attached to or occupied with the station: Great Eastern Railway Company v. Harwich Commissioners, 27 L. T. (N. S.) 543.

Questions have arisen as to how far the value of property may be increased by rights or privileges not actually arising out of the land or connected with the soil itself, but nevertheless attached to the occupation by mere personal contract. Thus, where the owner of a brewery, being also owner of several public-houses, had bound the lessees of these houses to purchase their beer at the brewery, and then let the latter to a tenant who paid one sum for the brewery and another for the good-will and trade in respect of these houses, it was held, in the case of Allison v. Monk Wearmouth Shore, 4 E. & B. 13; 23 L. J. M. C. 117; 18 Jur. 1075; 23 L. T. 232; 18 J. P. 438, by two judges against one, that the brewery was properly to be rated at the value enhanced by reason of the privilege. The dissentient judge considered that the covenants of the lessees were personal, transitory with the contractors, and only accidentally connected with the hereditaments occupied, and therefore not to be introduced into the estimate. In a subsequent case, Sunderland Overseers, apps., Sunderland Union, resps. 18 C. B. (N. S.) 531; 34 L. J. M. C. 124; 13 L. T. (N. S.) 239, a contrary decision was given, though here also the court was not unanimous. It was held by two judges against one, that the value of the brewery was not to be enhanced by reason of the obligation imposed upon the occupier of tied public-houses to deal with the owner of the brewery. On the other hand, it was held that the rateable value of the public-house was not to be diminished in consequence of this obligation imposed on the occupier.

The case of a soke mill, when by prescription the owner can compel the inhabitants of a district to grind thereat, was admitted to fall within the general rule, so that the mill was to be valued at an increased amount according to the value of this prescriptive right: Allison v. Monk Wearmouth Shore, ubi sup. So, a canteen at a barrack, though let at two rents, one for the mere value of the building, the other for the privilege of using it as a canteen; that is, as a public-house for the barrack, was held as properly assessed upon aggregate sums, as representing the actual value of the premises: Rex v. Bradford, 4 M. & S. 317.

from collateral circumstances.

On the other hand, detriment or depreciation may arise from collateral circumstances. A shop in an unfrequented neighbourhood, a private dwelling-house in a poor or unfashionable locality, cultivated lands at a distance from any town or road, are necessarily to be valued at a lower rate than if situated in a different place. The vicinity of nuisances, or other matters calculated to injure the enjoyment of the property, depreciate its actual intrinsic value.

Thirdly. There is a considerable amount of property in which the profits are of a casual and uncertain nature, from which sometimes large profits are derived, sometimes no profits at all. No fixed annual profit being raised, it is necessary, where the owner is the occupier, to consider the result of a series of years, and to take an average of the profits during those years. The unproductive years must be compared with the abundant years, and an estimate must be formed from the result. It is manifest that such a course would be pursued by a person proposing to hire such property at rack-rent. The value in this case is said to be taken communibus annis.

Hence, it has been determined that the cemeteries ^{Cemeteries.} now established by companies in different places are to be valued with reference to an estimate of the amount received in a series of years from the sale of graves, catacombs, and vaults, which are disposed of for perpetuity, and also from fees paid for common interments where no perpetual right is conveyed, and from the herbage on the unbroken ground, allowance being made for the expenses of building the catacombs and vaults, and preparing them for use. If the fees embrace the performance of the services, as is usual, the whole amount appears to be properly the subject of the estimate, a deduction being made for the stipends payable to the clergyman, clerk, and sexton, and for the other expenses incurred in providing for the interment: Reg. v. St. Mary Abbots, Kensington, 12 A. & E. 824; S. C. 2 Lum. P. L. C. 59. It has been deemed most in accordance with the law to ascertain the total annual receipts, and make such deductions therefrom as constitute the profits of trade, besides the deductions specifically allowed by the Act here commented upon: Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 14 Jur. 519; 14 Q. B. 571.

A cemetery company sold plots of ground for graves, conveying to the purchasers the legal fee simple in trust that the purchasers might use the plots for burying according to the rules of the cemetery ; and, subject to that, in trust, for the company. The company were under such circumstances held liable to be rated as occupiers of the cemetery ; and the profits got from the sales were to be included in the rateable value of the cemetery : Reg. v. Abney Park Cemetery Company, 29 L. T. (N. S.) 174 ; 42 L. J. M. C. 124 ; L. R. 8 Q. B. 515.

yard.

The churchyard of a parish situate therein is not indeed subject to be rated, except where the minister derives a profit from the herbage. But a burial ground of a parish provided in another parish is not exempt from assessment to the poor rate of the latter, though the statute 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 15, provides that land purchased by a burial board for a burial ground shall not, while used for such purposes, be assessed at a higher value than at the time of its purchase.

Woods and woodlands.

There was a peculiarity in regard to woodlands, arising out of the terms of the statute of Elizabeth. That statute enumerates, among other items of assessable property, saleable underwoods. Hence, it was held that no other woods or woodland than those in which there are saleable underwoods are rateable so far as the trees are concerned. Therefore, trees planted or reared for the purpose of becoming timber, or for some different purpose than that of sale, were not to be assessed. It was immaterial what might be the species or kind of tree. Although

in itself calculated to become timber, yet if the tree be ^{Woods and} cultivated as underwood it was rateable : Lord Fitzhard- ^{planta-} inge v. Pritchett, 36 L. J. M. C. 49; 8 B. & S. 216; ^{tions.} L. R. 2 Q. B. 135.

The underwoods, which, being generally raised for the purpose of sale, are cut down at certain intervals, and produce new shoots, fall within the description of "saleable underwoods : " Rex v. Ferrybridge, 1 B. & C. 375; 2 D. & R. 634; and the general inquiry was as to the mode and object of the cultivation. There was some difficulty in obtaining the exact definition of the term; but this is clear, that trees which are capable of reproduction and of yielding a succession of profits are underwoods; and when the produce is sold, whether regularly or at irregular intervals, the land will be properly described as saleable underwoods : Reg. v. Narberth, North, 9 A. & E. 815; 1 P. & D. 590.

Where any profit is derived from the land on which the trees grow independently of them, as from the pasture or the grass, it appears to be established that this land is to be valued in respect thereof, whether the trees be exempt or otherwise.

Now by the Rating Act, 1874, 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 3, the Poor Rate Acts shall extend to the following hereditaments in like manner as if they were mentioned in the recited Act 43 Eliz.; that is to say,—

- (1.) To land used for a plantation or a wood or for the growth of saleable underwood, and not subject to any right of common.

Woods and
tions.

The Local Government Board, with reference to this enactment, in their circular letter of Nov. 24, 1874, point out that "the timber and other trees or shrubs themselves are not made rateable but the land on which they are growing, and therefore the statute expressly repeals so much of the statute of Elizabeth as relates to the assessment of the occupier of saleable underwood, and imposes the liability in respect of the land on which it is produced." But in all cases in which land is rated its value must be estimated by reference to what is produced on it.

By sect. 4 of the same Act the gross and rateable value of any land used for a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, shall be estimated as follows:—

- (a.) If the land is used only for a plantation or a wood, the value shall be estimated as if the land instead of being a plantation or a wood were let and occupied in its natural and unimproved state :

Where E. was owner and occupier of woodlands which were not used for the growth of saleable underwood, and he had the right of sporting in the woods, and the overseers added a small sum of two shillings per acre to the rateable value of the natural and unimproved land in respect of this sporting right, it was held that this was a proper addition, and was warranted by the Act 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 4: Eyton v. Mold, 45 J. P. 54; 43 L. T. (N. S.) 472.

- (b.) If the land is used for the growth of saleable ^{Woods and} underwood, the value shall be estimated as if ^{planta-} tions. the land were let for that purpose :

The Local Government Board, in their letter referring to the alteration in the language of the law whereby the land is assessable instead of the underwoods, say that "the mode of arriving at the value will virtually remain the same, as the value of the land can only be arrived at by estimating the value of its produce."

- (c.) If the land is used both for a plantation or a wood and for the growth of saleable underwood, the value shall be estimated either as if the land were used only for a plantation or wood, or as if the land were used only for the growth of the saleable underwood growing thereon, as the assessment committee may determine.

Fourthly. In many cases the subject of the occupation is destroyed by the use thereof. It is so in coal mines which are worked, in brickfields, stone quarries, or chalk pits. The newly discovered coprolites fall within this rule, though a contention was raised whether the mode of working them constituted an occupation of the land, or only the exercise of a license. The court held it to be the former, and consequently, that the works are rateable: Roads v. Trumpington, 40 L. J. M. C. 35; L. R. 6 Q. B. 56; 23 L. T. (N. S.) 821. The court in another case held that land which is in a shifting occupation, being worked for coprolites, should be rated in respect of the land actually ^{Where the surface is destroyed by the user. Brick-fields.}

worked during the year at its enhanced or coprolite value: Reg. v. Whaddon, L. R. 10 Q. B. 230; 39 J. P. 404; 44 L. J. M. C. 73; 32 L. T. (N. S.) 633.

In these cases, an estimate must be made of the proper rent which ought to be paid for the right of so consuming and destroying the soil. Such rent of course ceases to be a proper estimate of the value when the property has been exhausted by the process of mining, brick-making, or lime-burning.

With regard to the assessment of chalk pits to the poor rate, although the convenience and situation of the pits are to be considered in estimating what rent a tenant would reasonably pay, the actual profits derived from working the pits are not material in forming that estimate: see Reg. v. Aylesford Union, and Reg. v. North Aylesford, post, p. 65.

Royalty

Where the rent is paid in the shape of a royalty, being a payment calculated upon specified quantities of the soil raised or of bricks made, it affords a criterion upon which the annual value of the property may be estimated, and the same may be properly calculated with reference to the year for which the rate is made. Nevertheless, though the royalty, which is fixed by the lease, may form a proper basis of calculation for the rate, still it is open to consideration whether, with reference to all the circumstances of the case, the uncertainty of the market, or otherwise, the royalty so estimated do or do not exceed the rent which would be paid by a tenant who should then take the land; in other words, whether the royalty agreed upon be adequate or excessive with reference to the value in the particular year : Reg. v. Westbrook, 2 N. S. C. 599 ; 11 Jur. 515 ; 10 Q. B. 178. It is the practice in the coal districts for the overseers to ascertain the tons of coal annually raised, and estimate the rateable value by reference to the amount and value of the coal so raised, making all reasonable allowance for the expense of raising the coal. Sometimes the royalty paid to the landlord is adopted, but generally that is not considered of itself a satisfactory basis in respect of coal mines. See Report of the Committee of the House of Commons in 1867, on the Rating of Mines, and the Parliamentary Paper, No. 418, of 1857, which show that in practice great variation exists in the mode of ascertaining the annual value of collieries, and that no general principle is acted upon.

The well known valuer Mr. T. F. Hedley, of Sunderland and Birmingham, values the buildings, engines, railways, and fixed plant connected with each colliery, by calculating the annual values or mine rents for the minerals on the produce of each colliery during the year preceding his valuation at what he considers reasonable mine rents ; the land occupied by the colliery and the shafts and its buildings and machinery connected therewith he values in the same manner as other surface lands, buildings, and machinery. See Hedley, on the principles of Rating Mines and Manufactures, page 51.

Fifthly. Where premises are only occupied for a portion of a year, if the peculiar nature of the premises prescribe such limited occupation, still they are to be estimated at an annual value, with reference to such rents.

Partial

limited occupation. A familiar example is a theatre, where the occupation is only during a season, but the rate is to be imposed as upon a profitable occupation during the whole of the year. Lodging-houses at watering-places are only occupied during the season; nevertheless, they are valued at an average of the whole year's profit.

An engine-house, containing a pumping-engine, which was only occasionally used, was nevertheless held to be rateable: Birmingham Navigation Company, apprs., Birmingham Overseers, resps., 19 L. T. 311. The use of rifle butts on a common during certain days in the year has been recently held not to render them liable to be rated, but this was on the ground that there was no actual occupation of the land by the rifle association: Mildmay v. Churchwardens and Overseers of Wimbledon, 41 L. J. M. C. 133; 27 L. T. (N. S.) 265.

In the case of Heaton, app., Harborne, resp., referred to in Sir Rupert Kettles's pamphlet on the rating of non-productive land, upon the judgment of Lord CAMPBELL, C. J., it was held that the owner is rateable to the poor for land producing something which may be made beneficial, but from which land nothing whatever is in fact taken, which is unlet, and of which he has only such constructive occupation as arises by law from the possession of real estate. The facts of the case were stated in a special case for the opinion of the court as follows:—

“The appellant is the owner of a piece of land in the parish of Harborne, containing a quantity about seven-eighths of an acre, for which he is rated to the poor.

“ The land in question was purchased by the appellant in the year 1850, and formed portion of a farm cut into lots and sold as eligible for building land. The land purchased by the appellant was up to the period of the sale partly in pasture and partly in tillage.

“ A portion of the land was in the first year planted by the appellant with potatoes ; but has not since the first year been cultivated, nor has the appellant, or any of his servants, or any other person by his authority been upon the said piece of land for four years preceding the making of the rate—the other portion of the land which was in pasture remains in pasture, and grass is now growing upon it. The appellant has never let the land in question, and has never made any profit of it, having purchased it for building purposes. The land is capable of being let at a rental in its present condition for cultivation.

A practical difficulty sometimes arises in respect of premises capable of distinct occupations, of which portions are from time to time unoccupied. Usually, there is one principal occupier of the entire premises who underlets the portions. In strictness, he is only liable in respect of so much as is actually occupied at the time of the rate. Where the rate is laid upon the whole in a certain sum, if the value of the unoccupied part be included, the occupier's only remedy is by appeal: Reg. v. JJ. of Warwickshire, 2 L. T. 233; 29

Parts of premises unoccupied.

L. J. M. C. 176; Bavin v. Hutchinson, 6 L. T. (N. S.) 504; 31 L. J. M. C. 228. If the rate be laid separately upon the distinct part of the premises, the rate for the unoccupied part is in itself simply void. Instances of this occur in the factories in the manufacturing districts, and in chambers and lodging tenements in the metropolis and large towns.

Again, properties in one occupation may be rated at their separate value to a tenant although that value is enhanced by the proximity of the premises to other premises in the same occupation which are a losing concern: Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Birkenhead, 29 L. T. (N. S.) 27; 42 L. J. M. C. 141; L. R. 8 Q. B. 745.

owners in the place of the

The statute 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, enabled the vestry of any parish to resolve that the owners of apartments in houses let on rents between 6*l.* and 20*l.* should be rated instead of the occupiers.

Many local Acts existed in parishes to the like effect. But these and the general statute 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, by which the owners of small tenements were assessable in the place of the occupiers, have been repealed by the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 6.

The 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, in sect. 7, enacted in respect of a parish situated either wholly or partly within a parliamentary borough, that after the passing of that Act no owner of a dwelling-house or other tenement situate therein should be rated to the poor rate, except as thereafter mentioned, which exception, referring to houses let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated, was noticed above, p. 42. But this clause, though not repealed, is practically set aside by the provisions contained in the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41.

The new provisions as to the rating of owners in this last Act are as follows :—

The 3rd section provides for the payment of the rates by the owners instead of the occupiers, in the following cases :—1. Where the rateable value of any hereditament does not exceed 20*l.* in the metropolis, 13*l.* in the borough of Liverpool, or 10*l.* in the city of Manchester or borough of Birmingham, or 8*l.* if situate elsewhere.

The 4th section then enacts as follows :—

The vestry of any parish may from time to time order that the owners of all rateable hereditaments to which sect. 3 of this Act extends, situate within such parish, shall be rated to the poor rate in respect of such rateable hereditaments instead of the occupiers on all rates made after the date of such order, and thereupon and so long as such order shall be in force the following enactments shall have effect,—

“ 1. The overseers shall rate the owners instead of the occupiers, and shall allow to them an abatement or deduction of 15 per cent. from the amount of the rate.

“ 2. If the owner of one or more such rateable hereditaments shall give notice to the overseers in writing, that he is willing to be rated for any term not being less than one year, in respect of all such rateable hereditaments of which he is owner, whether the same be occupied or not, the overseers shall rate such owner accordingly, and allow to him a further abatement or deduction not exceeding 15 per cent. from the amount of the rate during the time he is so rated. If the notice be not given, any further allowance to the owner than the 15 per cent. would be illegal: Bennett v. Atkins, L. R. 4 C. P. 80; 40 L. T. (N.S.) 66; 43 J. P. 191.

“ 3. The vestry may rescind the order.

“ Provided that this clause shall not be applicable to any rateable hereditaments in which a dwelling-house shall not be included.”

Returning to the principles of rating, it is to be remarked, that it is not a correct principle to estimate land upon its actual value in any particular year, when the profit may from some peculiarity or accident be increased or diminished. But its value should be ascertained by reference to a series of years where the occupation takes place under the ordinary circumstances applicable to the particular species of property. The valuation is made with a present and prospective reference, so that the inquiry is what rent would the tenant then give. He would calculate upon the then state of things, and could not be influenced by circumstances which might occur pending his occupancy, but could not be foreseen. The statute does not propose an estimate of a rent for a year, but of the rent at which the tenement would let from year to year. Though no definite term is specified, perhaps, as in the case of large mansions, a term of seven years may be taken as a reasonable term upon which to compute the rent. A farmer is not allowed to escape the rate because some of his fields lie fallow. At the same time it must be remembered that the value is to be taken at the time of the assessment, and not with reference to some previous rate: Reg. v. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, 4 N. S. C. 511; 15 Q. B. 313; or to the cost price: North Staffordshire Railway Company v. Rushton Spencer, 7 Jur. (N. S.) 363; 30 L. J. M. C. 68. So, if circumstances arise which diminish the extent or nature of the occupation, there must be due attention paid to those circumstances: as if part of the premises be burnt down, or if a factory cease to be worked owing to any contingency of trade: Reg. v. Castleton, 10 L. T. (N. S.) 606; Staley v. Castleton, 33 L. J. M. C. 178; 5 B. & S. 505.

Sixthly. It is not necessary to consider whether the occupation of the premises be profitable to the occupant or not. A farmer or trader must pay the rate upon the land or the shop, although the farm or the shop may be occupied at a loss. So, a coal mine may be worked at loss to the miner, yet a profit may result to the owner of the mine. There must be an occupation beneficial in its nature, that is, the occupation of a subject-matter, producing a valuable return, though not necessarily valuable in any given year to the occupier on a balance-sheet of profit and loss: Reg. v. Taunton Market Trustees, 1 N. S. C. 577; 6 Q. B. 787.

profitable

But if no profit can be obtained from the occupation of the land by any one, the same is not assessable. Thus, a corporation owned a common, but the only profit was obtained by certain persons who had the right of common thereon; the corporation were held to be not rateable; and the commoners were also exempt, having only an incorporeal right, which was not the subject of assessment: Corporation of Lincoln, apps., Overseers of Holmes Common, resps., 36 L. J. M. C. 73; 8 B. & S. 344. Again, a public sewer which carried away the sewage of a large district into a river was not rateable, as it could produce no profit: Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, L. R. 4 Q. B. 15.

Improvements to be valued.

In valuing the premises, as already noticed, the rent which may be paid is not to be held as conclusive of the value, and consequently all improvements and additions made to them are to be taken into account, if the value be higher, although the amount of the rent paid to the landlord is not increased.

Seventhly. Care, however, must be taken to avoid introducing goodwill or the power of influencing customers, or the profits of trade, into the estimate of the value of the property. The former is of too vague and personal a character to be the subject of estimate; and the latter result from the capital expended in trade, not from the premises themselves, although, as the amount of the profits may be affected by the peculiar position of the premises, the capacity of producing such profits is properly estimated in the calculation of the value of the particular premises in their special locality. Here, also, should be recalled the remarks as to the obligations which the owners of breweries exact from the occupiers of public-houses, above discussed.

A cement manufacturer occupied a chalk-pit near his works, and used the chalk which he raised from the pit in the manufacture of his cement, thus deriving an extra profit from the pit beyond that obtainable by the occupiers of other pits in the neighbourhood. It was held that the rateable value of the pit was not enhanced by the profitable use, though the value might be increased by the convenience and situation of the pit to the cement works : Reg. v. Aylesford Union, 26 L. T. (N. S.) 618 ; S. C. Reg. v. North Aylesford Union, 37 J. P. 148.

So, also, the value of furniture or moveable fixtures is not to be estimated in the value of the premises, unless that value be increased by the peculiar nature of the furniture; thus, a dwelling-house, is not to be valued with reference to that furniture ; but a factory fitted up with fixed machines, a foundry having its furnaces and forges attached, a shop having counters and shelves, a billiard-room having billiard tables fixed in it, nursery-grounds having conservatories, hot-houses and green-houses erected thereon, should be estimated at a higher value than similar premises where those appendages are wanting, because they are the proper fittings of the premises, without which the occupation would be comparatively of little value.

Equally clear is the rule where fixed machinery, such as steam-engines, vats, presses, salt-pans, cranes, gasometers, retorts, purifiers, boilers, and the like is combined with the real property, and, though in some respects capable of severance, is fixed thereto, it increases the value of the occupied property. It is therefore necessary that the value of such machinery and fixtures should be taken into the calculation in making the assessment: Rex v. Birmingham and Staffordshire Gas Light Company, 6 A. & E. 634; Reg. v. Guest, 7 A. & E. 951; Reg. v. Haslam, 15 Jur. 972; 4 N. S. C. 720; 17 Q. B. 587; North Staffordshire Railway Company v. Rushton Spencer, ubi sup.; Reg. v. Lee, 35 L. J. M. C. 105; 7 B. & S. 188. In a distillery there were tanks so large as to form the entire roof of buildings, refrigerators, mash tuns, pumps, wash-backs, and reservoirs. These articles, which were all heavy, and in some cases screwed down to steady them, constituted, with fixture, one continuous process necessary for distilling; but all were complete and separate articles, bought and sold again. It was held, that as the articles were merely steadied by their own weight, or with the help of screws, and could be detached and sold separately, they were not fixtures, and not included as part of the rateable value of the building for the purposes of the poor rate: Chidley v. West Ham, 38 J. P. 773; 39 J. P. 310. But in a later case the appellant, the owner and occupier of extensive yards and buildings for constructing iron and wooden ships, and for manufacturing machinery for such ships, was rated at an enhanced amount in respect of certain machinery and plant placed on the premises and necessarily used for the purposes of his business; amongst them were boilers set in masonry, with pipes passing through the buildings and underground; engines standing on iron bed-plates bolted to stone foundations; shafts fastened to the walls; machines separate from each other upon wooden sleepers bolted to concrete foundations, but removable by unfastening the bolts; and other similar machines resting on prepared beds without fastenings. On a case stated by consent under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, it was held by the Queen's Bench Division, that though some of the machinery and plant was capable of being removed without injury to itself or to the freehold, yet being essentially necessary and permanently attached to the appellant's business, it was all rightly taken into consideration in estimating the rateable value of the premises: Laing v. Bishopwearmouth, 27 L. T. (N. S.) 781; L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 299; 47 L. J. M. C. 41; 26 W. R. 351; 42 J. P. 68.

The rule generally adopted in cases of machinery appears to be this, to include in the value of the premises all that constitutes the moving power, and all fixed receptacles and reservoirs; but to stop short at what may be considered to be the tools, engines, instruments, or other matters worked by the moving power. The rails of a railway company are fixtures for the purpose of assessment: Great Western Railway Company, apps., Melksham Union, resps., 34 J. P. 103. On the other hand, a steam-tug employed by a dock company, whose revenues arose from the vessels brought into their docks, was held to be not rateable: Reg. v. Southampton Dock Company, 4 N. S. C. 460; 14 Q. B. 587; see also Reg. v. Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. (N. S.) 489. And so also a floating-dock belonging to a ship-builder, whose building yard was on the bank of a river in which the dock floated, was held to be exempt: Reg. v. Morrison, 22 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 15; 1 E. & B.

153; 17 Jur. 485; and a floating derrick hulk attached to the soil under a navigable river by moorings is rateable, for it exclusively occupies a part of the river and an exclusive occupation is the foundation of rating: Cory v. Bristow, 41 L. J. M. C. 143; L. R. 2 H. L. Ca. 262; 36 L. T. (N. S.) 594. A wooden pier, however, floating on a river, but permanently attached to a landing-place on the bank was held to be rateable: Reg. v. Leith, 1 E. & B. 121, 136; 11 Jur. 522, 525. So, where it was fixed at one end to the shore of a navigable river, but floated at the other end, and rose and fell with the tide, it was held rateable as land: Reg. v. Forrest, 27 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 96; 22 Jur. 480.

The meters of gas affixed to the houses of the consumers, though found by the company, were held not to be included in the assessable value of the gas works: Reg. v. Lee, ubi supra, as they were only the means of measuring the gas supplied to the customers.

Certain silk machines in a factory fixed to the floor for the purpose of being kept steady, but otherwise moveable, were held not to be taken into the calculation in valuing the factory: Reg. v. Halstead, 32 J. P. 118; but in a later case it has been held that though some of the machinery and plant in a ship building yard was capable of being removed without injury to itself or the freehold, yet being partially necessary and permanently attached to the premises, it was rightly taken into consideration in estimating the rateable value of the premises: Laing v. Bishopwearmouth, 42 J. P. 68; L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 299; 37 L. T. (N. S.) 781; 47 L. J. M. C. 41.

Eighthly. Again, extrinsic profits, not themselves rateable, cannot be estimated in the valuation of property to which such profits are not appurtenant; thus, light-house tolls, being for the most part privileges and not compensation paid for the use of the light-house or the land on which it stands, are not rateable, and consequently must not be valued in the estimate of the light-house when the latter is rateable: Rex v. Tyne-mouth, 12 East 46. And tolls for the use of a ferry across a navigable river must not be taken into the calculation in estimating the value of the landing-place, though the landing-place is to be valued with a consideration of its being available for earning the tolls: Reg. v. N. & S. Shields Ferry Company, 22 L. J. (N. S.) M. C. 9; 1 E. & B. 140. Market tolls, not being paid for the use or occupation of any land, but for the simple license of selling goods in a market, are not rateable: Rex v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 221; Roberts v. Aylesbury, 1 E. & B. 423; Mayor of London, app., Overseers of St Sepulchre, resps., L. R. 7 Q. B. 333. Tolls authorized to be taken by an Act of parliament in respect of cattle brought into a market for sale, which tolls become due as soon as the cattle are brought into the market-place, and before the cattle are put into a pen or tied up, are mere market tolls, and not in the nature of stallage or tolls taken in respect of the use of the soil; and in assessing the lessee of the market and tolls to the poor rate, in respect of his occupation of the market-place, such tolls cannot be taken into account as enhancing the value of the occupation: Reg. v. Casswell, L. R. 7 Q. B. 328; 41 L. J. M. C. 108; 26 L. T. (N. S.) 574. In 1671 a crown charter gave Lord S., the lord of the manor, and his heirs, the right to hold a market in A. every alternate Tuesday, together with tolls. From 1784 to 1856 a stock market was held, certain payments being made to S., and also to some inhabitants, for the use of pens supplied. Certain land occupied by the market was afterwards obtained from S., with assignment of all tolls and profits, and this land was fenced in when not used for market purposes. Some pens were used by particular owners and salesmen: the rest were free for any animals. For all animals toll was paid for admittance to the market. In this case it was held, that the occupier was properly rated for the occupation of the soil, as the tolls were apparently incident to that occupation, and were not mere market tolls severed from such occupation: Percy v. Ashford, 40 J. P. 502; 34 L. T. (N. S.) 579. By a local Act a market company were incorporated and authorized to regulate the market places belonging to the corporation of Brecon, and to receive all tolls payable therefrom, which were thereby vested in them. They were, however, by another section, to pay to the corporation £210 a year, to be charged on the scheduled tolls, markets, and market-places by the Act vested in the company, and to be a first charge on those tolls next after the expenses of receiving them. This annual sum was to be devoted by the corporation to the payment of incumbrances incurred by the building of the old market-place. The company under the authority of the Act constructed new market-places on land vested in them, and collected tolls for the old and new markets. Upon a case stated, it was held, that the company were not entitled to a deduction of this £210 from the net annual value of their tolls in their assessment to the poor rate: Brecon Market Company v. St. Mary's, Brecon, 36 L. T. (N. S.) 109; 41 J. P. 325.

Tolls and rights.

Tolls are not rateable in themselves, but a toll-house is increasedlly rateable by reason of the facilities which it affords for the collection of the tolls: Williams v. Bedminster Union Assessment Committee, 34 L. T. (N. S.) 795.

In Reg. v. Caswell, ante, p. 69, it was sought to enhance the value of the market-house by a consideration of the market tolls leviable on goods brought into it, for sale, but this attempt failed. These tolls are considered to be payable, not in respect of the occupation of the land, but in respect of the franchise of the market. Also quayage tolls paid to a corporation by the masters of vessels landing goods at a port in which the corporation, as well as other persons, owned quays, and which tolls were paid indiscriminately in respect of the landing at all the quays, were held to be exempt: Reg. v. Lewis, 26 L. T. 58; 19 Jur. 1108; 5 E. & B. 508. A right to moor barges to a post in a navigable river on payment of a rent is only an easement, and is not rateable: Watkins, app., Gravesend and Milton Union, resps., 37 L. J. M. C. 88; L. R. 3 Q. B. 350; Grant, app., Oxford L. B. resps., L. R. 4 Q. B. 9. Whether in these cases the person receiving the rent might be rateable, was not discussed, but may require attention.

A right of common in gross, which is held as a personal right, and is not appurtenant to any land, is not rateable : Reg. v. The Corporation of Alnwick, 9 A. & E. 444. So, also, mere manorial rights, such as the right to appoint gamekeepers or other officers, to hold courts, or to receive heriots, are not subject to the rate. Quit rents, indeed, are included in the value of the land to the occupier, from which they are not deducted.

And upon this principle a railway was held to be not assessable in respect of a guaranteed dividend payable by the directors of another railway company, the guaranteed fund being independent of the user or occupation of the railway : Newmarket Railway Company v. St. Andrew the Less, Cambridge, 23 L. J. M. C. 76 ; 3 E. & B. 94.

Such as

On the other hand, profits, though of an incorporeal nature, which are appurtenant to or result from the possession of land and accrue in the parish, are to be taken into the account in valuing that land, as rights of way, and rights of common, appendant or appurtenant, or tolls paid for the use of the land, such as stallage and piccage tolls, which are paid for erections or stands in markets, or tolls for traverse over bridges or over land : Reg. v. M. of Salisbury, 8 A. & E. 716. So, anchorage and beaconage dues paid in a harbour in respect of the ownership of the soil of the harbour or its boundary have been held to be rateable : Reg. v. E. of Durham, 28 L. J. M. C. 232 ; 5 Jur. 130. Wharfage dues paid for the use of the wharves, are to be included in the value of the wharves : Reg. v. Dowlais Iron Company, 10 B. & S. 208 ; Reg. v. Rhymney Railway Company, Ib. 198. And if the land be not open to valuation, these tolls must themselves be estimated according to the principles herein explained. Some manorial rights, also, which occasionally increase the value of the manor-house and land to which they are attached, are, when they do so, to be introduced into the estimate of the value of the latter.

The rents paid for water power supplied to mills from waterworks, were held to be properly included in the assessable value of those waterworks: Greenock Parochial Treasurer v. The Shaws Waterworks Company, 9 Jur. 1207.

A local board are rateable to the poor rate only in respect of the profit they actually derive from the occupation of their waterworks and not in respect of the profit which a company, occupying the works solely for the purpose of profit, might make: Worcester, Mayor, &c., of, v. Droitwich Assessment Committee, L. R. 2 Exch. D. 49; 43 L. J. M. C. 81; 36 L. T. (N. S.) 186; 41 J. P. 355; affirming the decision in the court below, 34 L. T. (N. S.) 288; 40 J. P. 421. And where a statute prohibited a corporation from making any profit by the supply of water to a district, the court held that they were not to be rated as a trading company making a profit, but the actual receipts were the measure of the gross estimated rental: Liverpool, Mayor, &c., of, v. Wavertree, 39 J. P. 101; L. R. 2 Exch. D. 55.

Where a mere right of sporting over any piece of land, or of fishing in any stream or pool of water, is enjoyed by an individual, he was not assessable in respect thereof: Hilton and Wakerfield v. Bowes, Rights of sporting, fishing, and shooting.

L. R. 1 Q. B. 359; but the occupier of the soil or stream who granted the right, and derived a profit from the grant, was to be assessed in respect thereof by an increase in the value of the land. And the owner of a several right of fishery, if it carried with it some interest in land, was liable to be assessed in respect thereof: Rex v. Ellis, 1 M. & S. 652.

Now, by the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), s. 6 (1): Where any right of fowling, or of shooting, or of taking or killing game or rabbits, or of fishing (hereinafter referred to as a right of sporting), is severed from the occupation of the land and is not let, and the owner of such right receives rent for the land, the said right shall not be separately valued or rated, but the gross and rateable value of the land shall be estimated as if the said right were not severed; and in such case if the rateable value is increased by reason of its being so estimated, but not otherwise, the occupier of the land may, unless he has specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of an increase, deduct from his rent such portion of any poor or other local rate as is paid by him in respect of such increase; and every assessment committee, on the application of the occupier, shall certify in the valuation list or otherwise the fact and amount of such increase.

Game, according to 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, is defined as including "hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game, and bustards."

Woodcock, snipe, quail, landrail, and rabbits have been made the subjects of the laws relating to poaching, but are not properly game, and it will be observed that rabbits are expressly mentioned as distinct from game. By the Ground Game Act, 1880 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 47), s. 8, however, for the purposes of that Act, "ground game" means hares and rabbits; and if the right conferred by that Act upon the occupier to kill ground game on his land enhances the letting value of the land, that fact should be taken into consideration in determining the gross value for the purposes of assessment.

With reference to the provision that the Assessment Committee shall certify in the valuation list the fact and amount of the increase in the rateable value, the Local Government Board, in their letter, observe thus:—"It would appear, therefore, that in dealing with the right as an element of value it ought not to be estimated upon any such consideration as that of the rent which a third person might be found to give for it, but according to its worth to the occupier of the land upon the supposition that the right is not severed; or, in other words, that he himself is entitled to exercise the right without the power of making a profit by letting it." Of course it may be a profit to himself in his own enjoyment.

In estimating the annual value of sporting rights, for the purposes of assessment to the poor rate, the assessment committee should apply the principles of the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 15, and not merely consider the capacity, in their estimation, of the property for holding game. They should consider what a hypothetical tenant would give to take the right of sporting on a lease from year to year, and make therefrom the appropriate deductions authorized by the statutes. The estimate of the value must be reasonable in amount, and should have reference to the extent of the game usually on the land and under ordinary circumstances, and not the quantity that closely preserved land could hold. If there is good cover for game on the land that fact would be an element in estimating the rent which a tenant would give.

By 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 6 (2), where any right of sporting, when severed from the occupation of the land, is let, either the owner or the lessee thereof, according as the persons making the rate determine, may be rated as the occupier thereof.

Where the owner of an estate demised the right of sporting over the estate, retaining the land in her own occupation, it was held that the right of sporting was severed from the occupation of the land within the meaning of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 6, sub-sect. 2 : Kenrick v. Guilsfield, 44 J. P. 202 ; 41 L. T. (N.S.) 624.

(4.) For the purposes of this section, the person who, if the right of sporting is not let, is entitled to exercise the right, or who, if the right is let, is entitled to receive the rent for the same, shall be deemed to be the owner of the right.

Dues or tolls paid to dock companies by vessels which enter or use the docks are the subject of the rate, that is to say, they are to be taken into the calculation in rating the docks. But tolls or dues paid to such companies in respect of vessels which do not enter or use the docks, are not to be so calculated : Reg. v. Hull Dock Company, 1 N. S. C. 621; 21 L. J. M. C. 153; 16 Jur. 503. So, also, as noticed above, quayage tolls in an open port are not assessable. The general liability is, however, often qualified by the terms of the local Acts applicable to such properties if they be not of late date.

Ninthly. Where there are buildings and land which are the subject of occupation jointly, it is not correct to omit either of them in the valuation; but the common practice is to value the whole jointly, so as to bring into the estimate of the principle the value of that which is the adjunct. Thus, the farmhouse and barns or other buildings are estimated in the valuation of the farm; so the parsonage and glebe are valued as one tenement when occupied together by the incumbent; and the land which adjoins and is occupied with the factory, is properly estimated in the valuation of the factor. This practice was thought to be unobjectionable, provided due attention was given to the value of the whole of the property; but in rural sanitary districts it leads to inconvenience in making special rates under sect. 230 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), if the rateable value of houses and buildings is not separately distinguished from that of the land, &c.

If the buildings on the premises be beyond what is required for the purposes of the farm or factory, or other principal subject of occupation, those buildings will properly form a distinct subject of valuation. Thus, if there be a mansion-house or an inn on the farm, or if there be a residence for a partner or foreman at the factory (Reg. v. Wall Lynn, 8 A. & E. 379), it would be improper to include these in the general valuation of the farm or factory.

Where premises are occupied necessarily by the party rated, if his occupation does not entitle him to exemption, they are to be valued as though occupied by any other person. A parson is thus assessed for his parsonage (which is to be valued as any other similarly built and similarly situated dwelling-house: In re Bennett, 11 L. T. (N. S.) 24); and so is the manager of a factory, the superintendent of a railway, or the resident officers of an hospital, for their respective residences if they do not occupy as servants merely.

Occupation
by servants.

Buildings occupied by servants, such as lodges, coach-houses, or stables, which are clearly used as subsidiary to the main or principal premises, are properly included in the valuation of the latter, to which they are appurtenant; as are also portions of land occupied as gardens, or ornamental grounds, or lakes, ponds, or canals in such grounds. So, also, certain persons holding offices under the Crown who were required for the due discharge of their public duties to occupy premises the property of the Crown appropriated to such offices were held to be exempt: Reg. v. Stewart, 22 J. P. 480; 27 L. J. M. C. 81; 8 E. & B. 360.

It may be here remarked, that though certain properties may be in themselves exempt from assessment, either from want of profitable user or from other circumstances, there may be an occupation of adjoining land or premises which may be assessable. Thus, where a public sewer was held not to be rateable, the court held that the land on which wharves, engine-houses, and pumping machines were erected for the
 Q. B. 15; 9 B. & S. 739; Metropolitan Board of Works
v. West Ham, L. R. 6 Q. B. 193; 40 L. J. M. C. 30.

Tenthly. Some extraordinary properties of a valuable character may exist in the soil, such as salt or sulphur springs, mineral waters or spas. These are to be taken into consideration in estimating the assessable value of the land: Reg. v. Miller, Cowp. 619.

It may, however, be well to notice the peculiarity in respect of the rating of mines. These are, certainly, a species of real property occupied by the persons working them, and should have been rated in like manner as all other property of that kind. But the statute of Elizabeth enumerated coal mines as a distinct subject of assessment, and hence for a very long period it had been held that all other species of mines were exempt from the rate, and this ruling has been upheld by the House of Lords in the case of Morgan v. Crawshay, L. R. 5 H. L. 304. This rule is, however, confined to the persons working the mine, for if in any mine the owner reserve to himself, as a rent, any portion of the unmanufactured ore when raised from the earth, he is rated in reference to that portion as an occupier of the mine, and is subject to the rate. The value of that portion is to be ascertained, and, as in general it is a rent paid to the owner without any cost or expense to him, it does not appear to be open to any deduction, other than that of the tenants' rates and taxes. If, instead of the reservation of the ore, the owner receives a commuted sum in money by way of royalty, this is not rateable, and the whole is exempt: Crease v. Sawle, 2 A. & E. (N. s.) 862; Reg. v. Todd, 12 A. & E. 816. And as metalliferous mines were not rateable, it was held that an engine used in such a mine for raising the ore to the surface was not to be rated: Rex. v. Bilston, 5 B. & C. 851. This decision is now considered as supported, upon the ground that the engine formed in itself part of the mine. But it has been held by the Court of Queen's Bench, that the surface land which is occupied with the buildings, machinery, plant, tramways, and other workshops connected therewith, and used for the purpose of working the mines, is not exempt from being rated: Guest v. East Dean, L. R. 7 Q. B. 334. This case also supplies the principle for the assessment, which assumes the mine and surface to belong to different owners, and then enquires what rent the owner of the mine would give to the owner of the surface for the surface land with the above described subjects upon it to be used in the working of the mine. The surface lands, buildings, and engines connected with mines should be rated in the same manner and subject to the same deductions as other surface lands, buildings, and the engines, and the minerals and shafts or adits on three-fourths of the amount of the rents at which the same might reasonably be expected to let one year with another. Such rents to be estimated on the quantity of minerals worked ^{Mines.} during the year preceding making the valuation lists. On this principle, when once the value of the surface lands, buildings, and machinery is settled, and the tonnage or acreage rents are fixed for the different minerals, the rating of the mines would be "self adjusting," and vary according to the produce of the mines and the quantity of minerals worked.

An artificial watercourse made in land adjoining a mine for the purpose of that mine, is rateable as land enhanced by the watercourse, which itself was valued as serving the mine: Talargoch Company (Limited) v. St. Asaph Union, 39 L. J. M. C. 149; 9 B. & S. 210.

Now by the Rating Act, 1874, 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 3, the Poor Rate Acts shall extend to mines of any kind not mentioned in the 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1; and where a tin, lead, or copper mine is occupied under a lease or leases granted without fine on a reservation wholly or partly of dues or rent, the gross value of the mine shall be taken to be the annual amount of the whole of the dues payable in respect thereof during the year ending on the 31st day of December preceding the date at which the valuation list is made, in addition to the annual amount of any fixed rent reserved for the same which may not be paid or satisfied by such dues: 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 7.

The rateable annual value of such mine shall be the same as the gross value thereof, except that where the person receiving the dues or rent is liable for repairs, insurance, or other expenses necessary to maintain the mine in a state to command the annual amount of dues or rent, the average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses for which he is so liable shall be deducted from the gross value for the purpose of calculating the rateable value: 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 7.

In the following cases, namely,—

1. Where the mine is occupied under a lease granted wholly or partly on a fine; and

2. Where any such mine is occupied and worked by the owner; and

3. In the case of any other such mine which is not excepted from the provisions of this Act and to which the foregoing provisions of this section do not apply, the gross and rateable annual value of the mine shall be taken to be the annual amount of the dues, or dues and rent, at which the mine might be reasonably expected to let without fine on a lease of the ordinary duration, according to the usage of the country, if the tenant undertook to pay all tenants' rates and taxes and tithe rent-charge, and also the repairs, insurance, and other expenses necessary to maintain the mine in a state to command such annual amount of dues or dues and rent. [Ibid.]

The purser, secretary, and chief managing agent for the time being of any tin, lead, or copper mine, or any of them, may, if the overseers or other rating authority think fit, be rated as the occupier thereof. [Ibid.]

In this section,—

The term "mine," when a mine is occupied under a lease, includes the underground workings and the engines, machinery, workshops, tramways, and other plant, buildings (not being dwelling-houses), and works and surface of land occupied in connexion with and for the purposes of the mine, and situate within the boundaries of the land comprised in the lease or leases under which the dues or dues and rent are payable or reserved: 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 7. Mines.

The term "dues" means dues, royalty, or toll, either in money or partly in money and partly in kind; and the "amount of dues" which are reserved in kind means the value of such dues: [Ibid.]

The term "lease" means lease or sett, or license to work, or agreement for a lease or sett, or licensed to work: [Ibid.]

The term "fine" means fine, premium, or fore-gift, or other payment or consideration in the nature thereof. [Ibid.]

If these dues are wholly rendered in kind the mine is not within this section. As regards other mines, such as iron, coal, or salt mines, no statutory provision exists for the mode of valuation. [Ibid.]

By sect. 13 nothing in the Act shall apply to a mine of which the royalty or dues are for the time being wholly reserved in kind, or to the owner or occupier thereof.

The Van Mining Company occupied and worked a lead mine under three leases; by one a royalty of one-fourteenth of the minerals obtained under it when ready for smelting, and merchantable on the banks of the works, were reserved to the lessor, or, at his option in lieu thereof, the full value in money; by the second and third, the lessor, who was a different person from the lessor of the first lease, had a reservation for the time being only in money. The company were rated for the machinery and buildings occupied for the purposes of the mine, and the lessor of the first lease for the mine and the royalty or dues reserved in kind; and upon appeal it was held that this was a case within the exemption of the Rating Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), s. 13; that the previous rating clauses in that Act did not apply to it, and that therefore the rate was properly made: Van Mining Co. v. Llanidloes, 34 L. T. (N.S.) 692; L. R. 1 Exch. D. (D. C. A.) 310.

The practical difficulty in the way of the overseers and the assessment committees will be to ascertain what dues were paid during the time specified and what the reserved rents amount to. The statute 35 & 36 Vict. c. 77, s. 10, requires returns to be made to the Secretary of State on or before February 1st in each year of the annual amount of the mineral wrought from the mines during the previous year, but it expressly prohibits the return from individual mines being open to inspection without the consent of the mine owner. The 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 13, gives the committee power to call for numerous documents but not to call for private papers and accounts, such as these. If the mine owners do not supply the requisite information on these points the values must be made upon estimates framed in accordance with the rule expressed in this section, and if they should be considered excessive the persons aggrieved will have their remedy by appeal.

The Local Government Board in their circular letter point out that the whole of the machinery, works, and buildings will be covered by the assessment estimated upon the dues.

The overseers have an option as to who is to be ^{Mines.} rated. They will often find it impossible to ascertain who are the persons working the mine, and therefore will choose the ostensible agent. It seems that he will be liable personally for the rate as an ordinary occupier.

Where any joint-stock or other company is rated for a mine, the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 106, s. 10, enables an officer to be entered in the rate book under the name of such company, and to vote for the property.

Where the mine runs into two parishes it must be divided for the purpose of rating between the two parishes in proportion to the occupation in each. See Rex v. Foleshill, 2 A. & E. 593; 4 Nev. & M. 360; 4 L. J. M. C. 63.

By sect. 8, where any poor or other local rate which ^{Deduction of rate by tenant of mine.} at the commencement of this Act any lessee, licensee, or grantee of a mine is exempted from being rated to in respect of such mine, becomes payable by him in respect of such mine during the continuance of his lease, grant, or license, or before the arrival of the period at which the amount of the rent, royalty, or dues is liable to revision on re-adjustment, he may (unless he has specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of the abolition of the said exemption) deduct from any rent, royalty, or dues payable by him one-half of any such rate paid by him :

Provided that he shall not deduct any sum exceeding what one-half of the rate in the pound of such poor or other local rate would amount to if calculated upon the rent royalty, or dues, so payable by him.

Mines.

A covenant in a lease of iron-stone mines to pay a certain rent, "free of all rates, taxes, and deductions whatsoever, parliamentary, parochial, or of any other nature," is not a "specific contract to pay the poor rate, in the event of the abolition of the exemption" of iron-stone mines within sect. 8 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, and the lessee is therefore entitled under that section to deduct half the poor rate from the rent. Duke of Devonshire v. Barrow Hæmatite Steel Co., L. R. 2 Q. B. D. (C. A.) 286; 36 L. T. (N.S.) 355; 46 L. J. Q. B. 435. In the court below, 35 L. T. (N.S.) 474; 46 L. J. Q. B. 96.

And again, a covenant by the lessee in a mining lease to pay "all manner of taxes, rates, assessment charges, and impositions whatever . . . which now are or which shall at any time hereafter be imposed upon the said demised mines and premises," is not a specific contract to pay the poor or any other local rates in the event of the abolition of the exemption formerly existing, within the meaning of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, s. 8: Chaloner v. Bolckow, 39 L. T. (N.S.) 134.

By sect. 9, where any occupier, lessee, licensee, grantee, or other person is authorized by this Act to deduct any rate or sum in respect of a rate from any rent, royalty, or dues payable by him, then,—

(1.) Any payment so authorized to be deducted shall be a good discharge for such amount of rent, royalty, or dues as is equal to the amount of such payment, and shall be allowed accordingly.

(2.) Any payment so authorized to be deducted may ^{Mines.} be recovered as an ordinary debt from the person to whom the rent, royalty, or dues may be payable.

(3.) The person receiving the rent, royalty, or dues shall have the same right of appeal and objection with reference to the rate and to the valuation of the hereditament in respect of which the rate is payable as he would have if he were the occupier of such hereditament.

By sect. 10, after the commencement of the Act the hereditaments to which the Poor Rate Acts are extended thereby, and which are thus made rateable to the relief of the poor, shall be rateable to all local rates in like manner as if the Poor Rate Acts had always extended to such hereditaments. ^{Liability of property to local rates as well as poor rates.}

Eleventhly. The sole inquiry when assessing property is, as to the annual value of the land to the occupier; and, therefore, it is immaterial what may be the tenure of the land, or the extent of the interest which the tenant holds in it. The annual value will be the same, whether the tenure be freehold, copyhold, customary or leasehold, and whether the land be held by a person who may be tenant for life, or for an estate of inheritance. No mortgage or similar charge upon the property will affect its rateable value. ^{The tenure of the property, or the interest of the occupier therein, is immaterial}

Even when the occupation is arbitrary on the part of the landowner, and may be shifted from one place to another at his will, yet so long as it lasts the occupation is the subject of assessment. As when a railway ^{Shifting occupation.}

company allows the supports of an electric telegraph to be in one part of the line, but requires them to be movable elsewhere at their pleasure: The Electric Telegraph v. Salford, ubi supra.

Allowance for the cost
tion.

Twelfthly. In some cases the nature of the property which is the subject of profit is such, that, in the ascertaining of the annual value, an allowance must be made for the expenses of collecting the profit. Such instances occur in the valuing of piers, quays, canals, docks, railways, and the like, where the profits are raised by the dues or tolls payable by parties using them, but which dues are collected at much expense. It will be seen hereafter, that this allowance is also to be made in respect of tithe rentcharges.

Occasionally, this exigency occurs also in house property, particularly where it is of a low and inferior description, in which cases the rents are collected at small intervals, and consequently at a great cost of time and money, which diminishes the annual profit derivable from the property.

But it is only where the nature of the property itself requires an expenditure in collection that an allowance is to be made. No such allowance is to be made because agents or commissioners are appointed to collect the rentals for the purpose of distribution, or in discharge of trusts, for the assessment depends upon the value of the property, not with respect to the expenses that the individual may have occasion to incur in the collection, but with respect to the property itself. See Ex parte Lord Cowley, L. R. 1 Exch. 288.

Thirteenthly. The statute refers, for the mode of estimating the value, to the market price of the rent of the tenements to be valued. This is available in most of the ordinary kinds of rateable property; but there are cases in which the reference will be ineffectual, and the law at present supplies no other means of estimating the value. There is much rateable property which is not strictly capable of being valued by reference to its lettable value.

Mode of estimating the value by reference to presumed letting.

Such are most of those large works which are carried on by extensive corporations or trading companies. The works are of such magnitude and of such a nature that the idea of letting them is unreasonable, though by no means impossible.

The lease of a canal, of a large dock, or the main line of a railway, cannot be contemplated for practical purposes. It is true that there are not unfrequently leases of some of these works, but such leases, as noticed above, are rather in the nature of assignments of the whole concerns, with all their appurtenances, as well movable as immovable, than demises of the mere tenement or rateable hereditament.

Leases of canals, docks, and railways.

Hence, it becomes necessary in practice to seek some other mode of arriving at the correct estimate of the value of that property, which alone is the subject of assessment. Great difficulties arise in the process. The annual value of the land must be evolved from its produce. Thus, the total receipts produced by those parts of the works which are not in themselves capable of being valued according to the ordinary rule, must be ascertained, and out of those receipts the valuer must ascertain the amount which represents the annual value of the land corresponding with the rent which is paid to the owner of a field or house for its occupation. These receipts in gross represents—the value of such occupation—the return for the capital expended upon the land, that for the capital expended in the working of the undertaking (being in fact the profits of trade, embracing sometimes the expense of management, direction, collection, and like contingencies),—the return for the annual repair and sustentation of the works—sometimes the reserve for the restoration of permanent works, and lastly, the return for the rates and taxes payable in respect of the undertaking.

These various subjects of inquiry are more or less to be met with in all investigations into the value of these species of property.

the legislature.

The first difficulty is of course to arrive at the actual receipts. If these be ascertained in gross it may generally be left to the owners of the property to make out the separate items of the receipts, and establish the extent of their exemption. As most of these works are of a public character, there is generally published some statement of the accounts, from which the receipts as well as the items of expenditure are publicly disclosed. But as to one important class of works, assistance has been afforded by the legislature; and the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 20, s. 107 (the General Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845), enacts "that the company shall every year cause an annual account in abstract to be prepared, showing the total receipts and expenditure of all funds levied by that Act, or the special Act for the year ending on the 31st day of December, or some other convenient day in each year, under the usual distinct heads of 'Receipts' and 'Expenditure,' with a statement of the balance of such account, duly audited and certified by the directors, or some of them, and by the auditors, and shall, if required, transmit a copy of the said account, free of charge, to the overseers of the poor of the several parishes through which the railway shall pass, and also to the clerks of the peace of the counties through which the railway shall pass, on or before the 31st day of January then next; which last-mentioned account shall be open to the inspection of the public, at all reasonable hours, on payment of the sum of one shilling for every such inspection;" and the company is rendered liable to a penalty of 20*l.* for every omission. It will be noticed, however, that the Act does not require the company to show the receipt and expenditure in respect of the railway in each parish through which it passes.

Among the subjects of calculation for the purpose of ascertaining the value of a railway are terminal charges. These are the earnings of the staff and appliances at the stations and termini of the line, and there is a corresponding allowance made for the cost : Reg. v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 4 B. & S. 58; 32 L. J. M. C. 174.

Deductions from gross receipts.

Assuming that the gross receipts have been ascertained, it is necessary to be determined what is legally to be deducted from them. This has been considered most frequently in the cases which have occurred in the rating of railways, where the company, besides making and maintaining the line, carry on the trade of carriers of passengers and goods, and also in the rating of docks or harbours and rivers liable to assessment.

Deductions from gross receipts.

It has been held that from their receipts the following deductions are proper; namely, a deduction of interest on the capital employed in engines, carriages, &c., by the company as carriers; and on the same capital for tenants' profits and profits of trade; of a per-centage for the depreciation of such stock beyond usual repairs and expenses; of a sum for the annual cost of conducting this business; of the separate value of land rated in other parishes; and of a sum for the cost of the ultimate fundamental renewal and reproduction of rails, chairs, sleepers, &c.: Reg. v. Grand Junction Railway Company, 1 N. S. C. 303; 4 Q. B. 18; Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, 2 N. S. C. 205; 6 Q. B. 179; and Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, 15 Q. B. 379, 1085.

Again, interest and tenants' profits, or the capital laid out in machinery, boats, movable and fixed plant of the commissioners of a harbour, have been held to be properly deducted from their gross receipts: Reg. v. The Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. N. S.) 489. Where an actual demise on any terms would be impracticable, and where a demise on the terms that the tenant should receive a profit beyond the expenses of collection, would, if practicable, be illegal, no deduction should be made on account of tenants' profits: Mersey Docks v. Liverpool, L. R. 9 Q. B. 98.

The allowance for the average annual depreciation of the permanent way of a railway is to be made, though the costs of the renewal be not incurred in the year, nor any funds be set aside annually for the renovation: Reg. v. London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, 15 Q. B. 313. Whether, if the company actually pay the cost of the renewal out of the capital, this amount should be allowed, is open to some question. In Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company (ubi supra), the court have decided in the negative, but that judgment is somewhat qualified by the latter decision.

Railway companies are often entitled to running powers, i. e., the right of carrying passengers over or across the line of another company. As these powers do not create an occupation by the company entitled to use them, that company was not liable to be assessed in respect of them: Midland Railway Company v. Badgworth, 34 L. J. M. C. 25. And where one company receives tolls earned by another passing over its line, and pays such tolls over to the latter, the former is entitled to have the amount of the tolls so paid over deducted from the gross receipts in ascertaining the rateable value: Reg. v. St. Pancras Vestry, 32 L. J. M. C. 146; 3 B. & S. 810.

Interest. But no deduction can be allowed for interest on the sum expended in procuring the Act under which the company are constituted, in raising the capital, or other original expenses, nor for actual loss on branch lines: Reg. v. The Great Western Railway Company, 15 Q. B. 379, 1085; 16 Jur. 217; 21 L. J. M. C. 84. Nor for a cash balance at the banker's, nor for stores on hand, nor for the cost of a steam-boat used in the making of a dock the subject of the rate: Reg. v. Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. (N. S.) 489. As regards the floating capital of a railway company, it has been laid down that whether any allowance should be made in respect of interest or tenants' profits thereon depends on the question whether a greater delay occurs in realizing the returns than is ordinarily incidental to the employment of capital: North Staffordshire Railway Company v. Rushton Spencer, 7 Jur. (N. S.) 363; 30 L. J. M. C. 68.

It is now established, though not without differences in the decisions of the courts, that a line worked at an absolute loss is not liable to assessment, and that the fact of a line conducing to profit on another line with which it is connected will not render it assessable, if not in itself of rateable value, and will not enhance the value which it would possess of itself in the parish where it is assessed: London and North Western Railway Company, apps., Cannock, resp., 10 B. & S. 334; Reg.

v. Haughley, 7 B. & S. 624; Reg. v. Llantrissant, 28 L. J. M. C. 93; L. R. 4 Q. B. 354; 10 B. & S. 328; South Eastern Railway Company v. Dorking, 23 L. J. M. C. 85; 3 E. & B. 491. But where parts of a line of railway passed through a district where there were two other competing lines, and the appellant's gross takings in the respondent's parish were more than absorbed by the expenses chargeable for the working thereof, plus the deduction allowed by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, but on the basis of the receipts derived from the enhancement of the traffic on the other parts of the system, the rateable value of the appellant's line in the parish was equal to 45 per cent. of the gross receipts; it was held that the appellants were rightly rated at that amount: London and North Western Railway Company v. Irthingborough, 35 L. T. (N. S.) 327; 40 J. P. 790.

The owners of tramways, constructed under the pro- Tramways. visions of the Tramways Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78), are rateable to the poor rate in respect of the occupation of the soil by the tramways so constructed, though the public may still use the surface of the rails as part of the highway: Pimlico, Peckham, and Greenwich Street Tramways Company v. Greenwich Union Assessment Committee, 29 L. T. (N. S.) 605; 43 L. J. M. C. 29; L. R. 9 Q. B. 9; 38 J. P. 117. And in assessing the rateable value of tramways the annual gross traffic receipts earned over the entire system must be taken as the basis of the estimate of the rent, and the net receipts in each parish as the criterion of the rateable value in each parish. Where, however, a tramway route begins and ends in the same parish, the net receipts of that route is the value upon which the tramway owners must be rated. [Ibid.] And where a tramway route extends through two or more parishes the fairest practicable mode of apportioning is by dividing the receipt from each district service route in proportion to the lineal mileage of such route in each parish respectively. The general expenses, except horse expenses, should be allowed proportionately to the number of car miles run over in each parish of the several district service routes therein: London Tramways Company (Limited) v. Lambeth, 31 L. T. (N. S.) 319.

The following is laid down as the proper method of ascertaining rateable value of railways and docks :—

1. A better criterion of the receipts due to the portion of a line of railway within the limits of a parish may be gained by taking the average mileage receipt of the whole line than by taking a mileage division of the gross rates less the amount charged at each end for collection and delivery, although every line may not have equally contributed to the receipts of the whole line.

2. Whatever part of a goods rate covers ordinary station work at a terminus should be taken to be receipts of the line to which the terminal station belongs.

3. A railway company provided the working stock of a line of railway, the company being paid for a time at the rate of 1s. 1d. per train mile and afterwards by a per-centage of $33\frac{1}{3}$ upon the total traffic receipts. The amount they received in 1872 was £7,254. This sum, it was held, should be taken as the aggregate amount of the expenses for locomotive power and repairs of carriages and waggons and relative services, and be divided amongst the parishes, according to the train miles run in each. It was further held that there should be no deduction for profits on capital, but that there should be a deduction for tenant's profits as distinct from profits on capital, and that the amount should be five per cent. upon the gross receipts, such per-centage to cover outlay on floating capital, stores, furniture, and the like.

4. The main line of a railway company ran through a certain parish for a distance of two miles and eight chains ; the gross receipts in the parish were ascertained by dividing the gross rates by mileage between the forwarding and receiving stations, after deducting, in the case of the merchandize traffic, the amount charged at each end for collection and delivery. This was held to be a proper mode of calculating such receipts, provided a deduction for cartage is made at the clearing-house, and that, as regards local traffic, only what the company expend in carting goods carried at carted rates, and a reasonable profit thereon, to be taken off the gross rate.

5. A railway company owned and occupied certain docks, which, on their seaward side, were employed in the accommodation of shipping and the transit of goods by sea. In other respects they were an adjunct of the railway. The company were held liable to be rated for such docks; but the rateable value was to be ascertained in the following manner:—From the estimated value of the docks should be deducted the value of such portions as gave to the company an income arising from dock dues and the like, so as only to charge them with expenses relating to the maintenance and repair of the docks, locks, and wharves, the hydraulic apparatus, and the pay of the staff employed in and about the admission and despatch of vessels; and if the receipts were not equal to the expense the company should only be rateable for this land according to its improved value, the other receipts in the docks being brought into the company's railway account: see—Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company, and Trent, Ancolme, and Grimsby Railway Company v. Caistor Union; and the Same v. The Glanford Brigg Union, 32 L. T. (N.S.) 264, in the Court of the Railway Commissioners.

Expenses

In a case of a cemetery company, the Court of Queen's Bench decided that the expenses of the management of the company, including the salaries of the directors and auditors, could not be deducted, considering that these expenses had nothing to do with the occupation of the land, but were rather an expenditure of the profits derived from the fund for the general benefit and purposes of the company: Reg. v. St. Giles, Camberwell, 14 Jur. 519; 19 L. J. R. M. C. 132; 14 Q. B. 571. And where unpaid commissioners manage a public work, such as the docks at the mouth of a public navigable river, no deduction is allowable for the expenses of their management: Reg. v. The Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. (N. S.) 489.

But a deduction for the expenses of management and direction has been allowed in another company, even when no expense had been in point of fact incurred, the only business of such company having been the occupation of the land: Reg. v. Southampton Dock Company, 4 N. S. C. 460; 14 Q. B. 587.

Thus, then, from the gross receipts, many of these various deductions being allowed, what may be termed the gross estimated rental is obtained. Nevertheless, as already noticed, the gross receipts are often given for this rental.

In assessing a racecourse and stands upon it, the hypothetical tenant must be assumed; and to arrive at the rateable value the takings on the racecourse by the tenant from all sources of profits from the occupation must be ascertained, as well as the expenses, so as to ascertain what rent a hypothetical tenant would give for liberty to use the land as a racecourse. The actual rent paid to the owner of the soil is not necessarily the criterion of value. Therefore, in ascertaining the rateable value of the land used as the racecourse the assessment committee may call for the books of the racecourse keeper, or may give affirmative evidence of the amounts of the profits made, they being a material element, though not an absolute test in determining the rateable value: Reg. v. Verrall, 45 L. J. M. C. 29; S. C.; Verrall v. Croydon Union, 33 L. T. (N. S.) 379.

applies to Tithes.

Proceeding with the consideration of this clause of the Act, it is to be next observed that a doubt was raised as to the meaning of the term hereditaments used in it, and it was contended in the case of Reg. v. Capel, 12 A. & E. 283, that it did not include tithes. But the court decided that the term did apply to tithes, and that consequently they were to be assessed upon the principle prescribed by the Act in like manner as land or houses.

The Court of Queen's Bench, in their judgment in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, hereafter referred to, say, "It is necessary in the assessment of the tithe-owner to proceed by analogy, which analogy must be as large and liberal as is necessary to effectuate substantial equality in the assessment, and at the same time compatible with the maintenance of the principle of the statute."

But the assessment of the tithes has been a matter of much difficulty and controversy.

Mode of valuing tithes according to the doctrine of the
Commissioners.

The Poor Law Commissioners, in a circular letter, dated 16th September, 1840, expressed their understanding of the proper mode of valuing tithes.

But the subject has been fully reviewed by the Court of Queen's Bench, in several cases which in late years have been brought before that court upon appeals against poor rates.

It will be necessary to consider the results of the decisions fully hereafter. But it is well to set forth the views expressed by the Poor Law Commissioners ^{Tithes.} in their letter, as for the most part they have been adopted.

They observed that Tithes, whether they constitute a part of the liability of a parson or vicar, or be in the hands of an appropriator or impropriator, are hereditaments, and are, therefore, subject to be rated on the estimate of their net annual value, as defined in that clause: Reg. v. Capel, 12 A. & E. 382; 9 L. J. M. C. 65.

“2. The gross annual value ‘(i.e., the gross estimated rental)’ of the hereditaments, is the entire sum which might be received in rent from a tenant, exempt from rates, taxes, or any of the other outgoings described in the first clause of the Act. Where the tithe has been commuted, and the tithe-owner is in the receipt of the tithe commutation rentcharge, the gross annual value will be the gross amount of the rentcharge, including the sum allotted for rates and taxes.”

This passage, as already noticed, has been qualified by the Poor Law Board in their circular letter of May 1859, so far as it applies to the gross estimated rental in the columns of the rate, but it cannot be denied that it is a proper exposition of the gross annual value.

“This gross annual value, ascertained by reference to the rentcharge, will vary every year according to the average prices of corn, and the overseers will be bound to rate the tithe-owner on the value of the rentcharge of the current year, just as they are bound to

Tithes. rate all other ratepayers upon the value of the rateable property, estimated at the time of the rate being made.

“3. The estimate of the net annual value is founded on the supposed rent which might be realized by the letting of the rateable hereditaments. This will entitle the tithe-owner to an advantage which, the commissioners believe, he has not in all cases had the benefit of. The rent which a tenant would consent to pay for the rentcharge, supposing the rentcharge to be let, would obviously be a sum which would remunerate him for the trouble of collection, and insure him against all risk of loss of rentcharge itself, and of loss of interest incurred by the obligation to advance rent, and by occasional delays in recovering the rentcharge, and against all incidental expenses incurred in enforcing his rights.

“The compensation of the tenant taking those risks will obviously exceed the payment which the tithe-owner would make to an agent or collector who incurs no risks, and is not bound to insure and pay to the tithe-owner a certain fixed sum at fixed times.

“To the benefit involved in this distinction the commissioners consider the tithe-owners to be clearly entitled by the express terms of the definition of net annual value in the Parochial Assessments Act.”

The Court of Queen's Bench confirmed this opinion in Reg. v. Goodchild, Reg. v. Lamb, and Reg. v. Hawkins, 37 L. J. M. C. 233, 254; E. B. & E. 1, so far as it applies to the allowance for the annual cost ^{Tithe.} of collection, the annual losses by reason of non-payment, and the annual expenses of legal process for the recovery of rentcharges. A claim was made in respect of what was termed the lessee's profit, being the sum which, it was urged, a lessee would seek to make over and above the compensation for these expenses, but the court, after deliberation, refused to allow it as a necessary deduction, though they admitted that possibly there might be a foundation for the claim if it was not fully compensated by the allowance made on the other heads. It is believed that in practice no claim for this extra allowance is now made, or, if made, substantiated.

“ 4. Having ascertained the rent at which the rentcharge might be reasonably expected to let, it will next be the duty of the overseers to ascertain the amount of deductions which are to be made in respect of rates and taxes, and other out-goings (if there be any such) which may be necessary for keeping up the value of the hereditaments.”

* * * * *

“Tithe commutation rentcharge, being a charge to which tithe itself is not liable, no deduction is to be allowed for this. Neither does the tithe commutation rentcharge appear to be a subject of repairs or insurance, or of any other expense for keeping up its value. If no such liability exists, no deduction can be allowed for such out-goings.

Tithes.

“ Having made these deductions from the supposed rent, the estimate of the net annual value will be complete, and the amounts of the gross annual value and the net annual value thus estimated are to be inserted in the rate-book, in the columns respectively headed ‘ Gross Estimated Rental ’ and ‘ Rateable Value.’ ”

The commissioners then proceeded to give an example from the case of Reg. v. Capel, as follows :—

The gross annual value of the tithe composition was estimated at - - £660 0 0

From this were deducted—

1. For the compensation of a lessee undertaking to collect the tithe composition, and to pay a fixed net rent to the tithe-owner -	-	£37	5	0
2. For usual tenant's rates and taxes - - - -	}	82 15 0
3. For ecclesiastical dues -
Total deductions - - -	-	-	120	0 0

Leaving a net annual value, or rateable value, of - - - - £540 0 0

The foregoing remarks of the commissioners apply equally to the case of tithes in the hands of ecclesiastical and of lay persons and corporations.

The rentcharge for the tithes must now be taken according to the amount settled by the commutation, and the overseers are not at liberty to refer to the Tithes. terms or basis upon which that commutation was settled, even though it proceeded upon the supposition that no deduction should be made in respect of future rates and taxes : Reg. v. Goodchild, E. B. & E. 1.

It will be remembered that reference was made above in page 21, to the decisions in cases where the tithes were commuted under local Acts for annual fixed rents to be paid clear of rates and taxes, in which it was held that no assessment to the poor rate was to be made thereon. In Rex v. Boldero, 4 B. & C. 467; Reg. v. Wiston, 5 A. & E. 250; and Rex v. Great Hambleton, 1 A. & E. 145, the language of the Acts was held not sufficient to exempt the rents from assessment.

By sections 40, 41, and 42 of the Tithes Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, where there is an extraordinary charge for tithes in respect of hop ground and market gardens newly cultivated, or in respect of coppice woods, the amount of such extraordinary charge is to be added to the ordinary charge in estimating the same as chargeable to all parliamentary, parochial, county, and other rates, charges, and assessments to which the tithes are liable.

It will now be proper to consider the deductions required to be made by this Act, and in the first place to notice that the Court of Queen's Bench, in their judgment in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, observe that "it is only by considering the deductions and allowances specified in the Act as instances applicable to one rule as to the deductions.

Tithes. great class of property and not as a complete enumeration of all, and by applying those analogically to other classes, that the statute can have its proper effect given to it."

Explanation of the deductions for repairs. Upon the subject of the deductions which are to be made from the estimated rent, the Poor Law Commissioners, in the letter upon the Act of March 3, 1837, directed to the overseers, remarked :—

"In estimating the cost of repairs it would appear that their annual average cost on a series of years should be considered, not the cost of such repairs as may be particularly needed at the time ; and you will take care not to admit into your calculation the cost of repairs or other improvements by which the hereditaments would be put into a better state than that at which they will continue to command the present estimated rental. This is the limit as to the repairs."

In the 9th vol. of the Official Circular, p. 188, the commissioners stated : "Where the yearly outlay for repairs is likely to be uniform for many years, a small number of years may be taken for the purpose of the average ; but when the condition of the property is likely to fluctuate extensively, so that a very considerable outlay may be needed in a particular year, while in ordinary years a small expenditure only is required, then the average cost will be most fairly calculated by including a large number of years in the series on which the average is taken." This rule is unfortunately very vague, and according to the definition in the statute no precise rule can be laid down. It is now Tithes. attempted in some places to express the deductions by different scales with reference to different classes of property, and in the Act for establishing uniformity of valuations in the metropolis, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, there is a schedule which contains maxima sums to be allowed as deductions in respect of certain classes there specified.

This course of proceeding is convenient for the guidance of assessment committees dealing with great numbers of hereditaments in many parishes, but it is not strictly applicable to parochial valuations.

Where the premises are let at a certain rent, the landlord finding the chief materials for repairs, and the tenant the residue, the cost of the repairs done by the tenant is not to be deducted from the rent so paid to arrive at the rateable value: Reg. v. Wells, L. R. 2 Q. B. 542; 36 L. J. M. C. 109.

Not only is an allowance to be made for the annual ordinary repairs, but, as already stated, the depreciation by wear and tear of the permanent way of a railway is to be allowed for, though the company may actually incur no expense in respect thereof, nor set aside any funds for the renovation: Reg. v. London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway Company, 4 N. S. C. 511; 15 Q. B. 313; Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, 15 Q. B. 1088. This indeed is in accordance with the rule applied to ordinary dwellings where no inquiry is usually made as to the actual expenditure.

Tithes.

The court, in Reg. v. Wells, ubi supra, indicated an opinion that in regard to farmhouses, buildings, and corn mills, an allowance ought in general to be made in respect of the contingent or future renewal of the buildings and machinery. Where an arbitrator, in deciding the value of a railway, allowed for the depreciation in the rolling stock an average sum calculated on the number of years the stock would last, the Court of Queen's Bench refused to interfere to overrule his award; considering that the hypothetical tenant would take into account in reference to the depreciation the probability that his tenancy would continue beyond the year: Eastern Railway Company. v. Haughley, L. R. 1 Q. B. 666.

In regard to canals, allowance is to be made for the ordinary repairs of the channels, locks, and the like; also, where necessary, for the expenses of supplying the canal with water: Rex v. Oxford Canal Company, 10 B. & C. 163.

And insurance.

The commissioners, in their letter on the Act, continued:—"The amount of the insurance against loss by fire to be deducted from the amount of the rent, must be limited to such only as applies to the rateable property, not such as applies to furniture," [stock,] "or other property, not subject to the rate."

Where the nature of the property is such that no insurance can be effected, no deduction for the insurance can be allowed: 9 Off. Cir. 188.

"The Act," they observed, "provides, that in case Tithes ; any expenses, besides those for repairs or insurance, should be found necessary to maintain the hereditaments in the state to command the estimated rent, such expenses shall also be deducted from the estimated rent. This provision is made to meet the possibility that such expenses not coming within the description of repairs or insurance may be found ; but as such expenses must be extremely rare, the commissioners do not think it necessary to attempt to describe them." But the passage in page 105, cited from the judgment in Reg. v. Goodchild, must be here attended to.

It is to be noticed, however, that the expenses of leases, conveyances, surveys, and valuations are not the subject of deduction ; nor the expenses incurred in procuring an Act of parliament for a railway or other public works : Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, 2 N. S. C. 222 ; 6 Q. B. 179.

In regard to deductions in the assessment of tithes, Deductions in regard to tithes. the observations of the commissioners in their letter dated September 16, 1840, above referred to, should be observed.

They add, "There are many payments of ecclesiastical tithe-owners consequent upon the receipt of tithe, but which, not being necessary to maintain the value of the tithe, do not appear to constitute subjects for deduction from the gross value of their tithe.

"Instalments of payments to Queen Anne's Bounty, Payments to Queen Anne's Bounty. for advances for improvement of the living, are not Tithes. allowable, any more than similar charges incurred by other owners of hereditaments for the improvement of their property. Nor are divisions of the net value of the tithe between the tithe-owner and other persons, such as fee-farm rents, allowable."

This opinion of the Poor Law Commissioners in reference to the payments to Queen Anne's Bounty, was confirmed by the Court of Queen's Bench in the case of Reg. v. Hawkins, E. B. & E. 1.

Curate's salary.

The commissioners then stated that the "Expenses of providing for the performance of the duties of incumbency, as for a curate's salary, cannot be deducted: see Rex. v. Joddrell, 1 B. & Ad. 403."

But this last opinion was materially modified by the judgment of the court in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild. The court there laid down this rule, that "where the curate is merely a substitute for the incumbent, as where the clergyman is non-resident, or being resident, from sickness, infirmity, or other less creditable cause, does not perform his own duty personally, but employs another person instead," no deduction was to be made. "But where, from the vast size or population of a parish, one man's labour is entirely insufficient for the duties necessarily to be discharged by the incumbent, and he employs a curate to aid him, the salary is to be allowed. If the bishop of the diocese acting under the statutes require the minister to appoint a stipendiary curate, there is no doubt that the salary is to be deducted. But if a clergyman, where the need is great, from a sense of duty, appoints a curate, himself Tithes devoting all his own time and attention to his cure, the reasonable stipend of the curate ought to be deducted. The application of this rule in particular cases must be for the parish officers and the justices."

This decision was afterwards explained to apply to those cases only where the incumbent has one benefice, or two parishes immemorially united into one benefice. A clergyman holding two separate benefices could not claim any deduction for a curate whose services were rendered necessary by reason of the incumbent holding the two benefices : Williams v. Llangeinwen, 1 B. & S. 699 ; 31 L. J. M. C. 54 ; 5 L. T. 309 ; Wheeler v. Burmington, 1 B. & S. 709 ; 3 L. J. M. C. 57 ; 5 L. T. 345.

It is also to be stated that this appeared to be a deduction only allowable to a clerical incumbent. If a lay impropiator employed a curate, and paid him a stipend out of the tithe, it seemed from the observations of the judges in the last case, that he could not have claimed a deduction for the stipend : see also Reg. v. Groves, 29 L. J. M. C. 179.

This decision, however, as to the allowance for the curate's services, was disapproved of by the court in subsequent cases. Hence, in one case, they held that it was to be made with reference to all the rateable income of the incumbent : Reg. v. Scriven with Tentergate, 8 L. T. (N.S.) 352 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1125. At length, in the case of Reg. v. Sherwood, L. R. 2 Q. B.

Tithes. 508; 8 B. & S. 596; 36 L. J. M. C. 113; 16 L. T. (N. S.) 663, the Court of Queen's Bench entirely reversed the previous decision, and held that the deduction for the curate's salary could in no case be allowed, as the payment was only a disposition pro tanto of the annual profits of the tithe with which the overseers had nothing to do, and the question as to non-beneficial occupation had been settled by the decision of the House of Lords, in the case of Jones v. The Mersey Docks Board, to be noticed hereafter.

It is right to mention that the court, in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, decided that no deduction was to be made in respect of the incumbent's own spiritual services. His personal labours, they said, are not a charge on the tithes, but on his personal conscience.

Ecclesiastical dues.

"But," the Poor Law Commissioners continued, in the above quoted letter, "ecclesiastical dues" (such as synodals), "payable by the tithe-owner, were decided by the same case (Rex v. Joddrell) to be a subject of deduction, inasmuch as they diminish the ability of the tithe-owner in respect of which he is by the statute of Elizabeth rateable. The commissioners believe that this would still be held to be lawful since the passing of the Parochial Assessments Act; and they also believe that an allowance to the tithe-owner for the expenses of repairing the chancel would, for the same reason, still be held to be lawful in all cases in which the tithe-owner is liable to that expense."

The deduction for the ecclesiastical dues was conceded in the late cases; but no reference was then made to the charge for the repairs of the chancel. This deduction is, however, generally allowed by overseers, though the above proposition is not altogether consistent with the decision of Reg. v. Capel, which seems to have put tithes upon the same footing as other hereditaments, and no deduction would be allowed to the occupier of lands in respect of liabilities to which he would be subject ratione tenuræ. But assuming that such deduction is properly made, the annual charge must be estimated, as in the cases stated in page 106, by an average of several years. In neither case is the number of years in any way fixed, but, in regard to the chancel, it seems most fair to refer to the course pursued in the parish in regard to the estimate for the repairs of other buildings.

So, also, an allowance should be made for the payment of tenths and first fruits; because, as it is said, they are ecclesiastical dues (see 3 Off. Cir. 12); but the true reason seems to be because to the extent of those payments the parson does not enjoy the tithe, but pays it to the Crown, in which case the property is by royal prerogative exempt from rate.

In the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, the Court of Queen's Bench, allowing a deduction for tenths and first fruits, point out that as these are calculated on the whole annui proventus of the incumbent, the total amount must not be deducted from the tithe, but must be deducted only from this source in proportion to the rest of the revenues of the incumbent.

Where parishes are divided for ecclesiastical purposes under any of the modern Acts applicable to this subject, Ecclesiastical districts.

Tithes. and there is a division of the tithes, and a portion is duly assigned to the incumbent of the new parish, the original rector or vicar ceases to be liable for that portion, and doubtless the new incumbent will be so. But if the incumbent of the parish make an annual payment, whether out of the tithes or otherwise, to the minister of the new district, he will not be entitled to deduct the amount from the assessable value of his tithe rent-charge.

In the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, the Court of Queen's Bench decided that this could not be allowed where the payment was made voluntarily, but expressed an opinion that the deduction would be allowable when the payment was made under some of those statutes. Thereupon it was sought to rate the minister of the new district for his stipend; as, however, this was only the payment of a sum of money or an annuity, that court decided that he was not assessable in respect thereof: Frend v. Tolleshunt Knights, 28 L. J. R. M. C. 169; 8 Jur. 866. But the same court afterwards held that a lessee of tithes was not entitled to a deduction in respect of a stipend paid by him out of those tithes to the minister of a chapel: Reg. v. Groves, 29 L. J. R. M. C. 179; 6 Jur. 1014. And it has been since decided in Lawrence v. Tolleshunt Knights, 31 L. J. R. M. C. 148; 8 Jur. (N. S.) 886, that the opinion previously expressed upon this point, in Reg. v. Goodchild, cannot be supported, and that the incumbent who receives the rentcharge cannot claim a deduction in respect of the stipend which he pays to the minister of the new district carved out of his parish.

Returning to the assessment of landed property in general, it is to be observed that in estimating the deductions to be made from the rent payable to the landlord, no allowance can be made for a ground rent paid to a superior owner : In re Elstone and Rose, 9 B. & S. 512 ; 34 L. J. M. C. 135 ; or for quit-rents, chief-rents, fee-farm rents, fines, amerciements, or heriots, interest on mortgages, or similar charges, as these are all only divisions of the net annual value of the land. On this ground the occupier of a wharf was not allowed to deduct the value of certain of the wharfage dues collected by him, but payable to another party : Reg. v. Rhymney Railway Company, 28 L. J. M. C. 75 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 76 ; 10 B. & S. 198. Even where the occupier was bound to pay a sum equal to the annual value to commissioners under an assessment for local purposes, the land was nevertheless assessable upon such value : Reg. v. Vange, 11 L. J. R. (N.S.) M. C. 117 ; 3 Q. B. 242. But a particular rate to be levied upon certain lands in a parish, and not upon others, being raised for the protection of the property from the sea, was held, before the passing of this Act, to be properly deducted, on the ground of unfairness in the omission to deduct it : Rex. v. Adames, 4 B. & Ad. 61 ; 1 N. & M. 162.

It is not a correct course of proceeding to make a deduction by one uniform rate from all property of a particular character in a parish, though this is often convenient in practice. It will not therefore be proper to deduct a certain percentage from all cottage property, or from all mills or factories, or farm buildings, in a parish, though it may occasionally be right to make a general allowance in respect of repairs in particular classes of property, as with reference to the machinery in such kinds of property as described above. It may be right to consider that all mills require a certain amount of annual outlay for particular repairs, and so of factories ; but with reference to the general subject of repairs, the only proper proceeding is to make deductions according to the actual state of each particular premises. See also the observations on page 106.

No deductions for quit-rents, or interest of mortgages.

The deductions not to be made by a uniform rate.

rates and taxes are to be deducted.

Continuing now the consideration of the deductions, it must be noticed that the rates and taxes which are mentioned in this section of the statute are the tenant's rates and taxes, and no reference is made to the rates or taxes charged on the owner or landlord in respect of the ownership of the land.

Hence, the poor rate, highway rate, watering rate, lighting (so decided in Reg. v. Goodchild), watching, police, or borough rate, board of health or district rate, and metropolitan general rate, are to be included in the estimate of those which the tenant is to bear, and are consequently to be deducted.

The tenant's income tax, chargeable under Schedule B. of the Property Tax Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, is to be deducted on assessing the tithe rentcharge : Reg. v. Goodchild, and Williams v. Llangeinwen, ubi supra. But this, it is presumed, is only to be deducted when it is in fact charged and paid, which is a very rare occurrence.

But it has not yet been determined whether the assessed taxes, which are assessed upon persons in respect of their occupation of houses above a limited amount are to be allowed.

The land tax (so decided in Reg. v. Goodchild), property tax, and other rates or taxes charged upon the landlord, are certainly not to be deducted in making the valuation of the land or tithe rentcharge.

The particular rate referred to in Rex v. Adames, in page 115, was treated as a drawback to be estimated in ascertaining the value of the property. In like manner the sewer rate: Reg. v. Hall Dare, 34 L. J. M. C. 17; 5 B. & S. 785; and the drainage rate: Gainsborough Union v. Welch, 41 L. J. M. C. 1; L. R. 7 Q. B. 64; 25 L. T. (N. S.) 589; 35 J. P. 773, were held to be properly deducted. But no deduction is allowable in respect of a water rate paid for the supply of water to the premises: Reg. v. Bilston, 35 L. J. M. C. 73; 6 B. & S. 908.

It is right, however, to observe that though the landlord's property tax is not to be deducted, yet when the receipts of any public company are referred to for the purpose of ascertaining the value of the rateable property occupied by them, a deduction has to be made on account of the income tax paid by the company in respect of their receipts as carriers: Reg. v. Great Western Railway, 6 Q. B. 205, but not on account of the property tax charged upon the property which they own. Neither was a claim for income tax allowed to a dock company occupying their own lands, which tax was not paid by them on the property, but was claimed in respect of the estimated profit or income of the supposed tenant of the docks : Reg. v. Southampton Dock Company, 14 Q. B. 587.

estimated.

In regard to the proper mode of estimating the amount of rates and taxes, the Poor Law Commissioners, in their letter of September 16, 1840, said :—

“ No means exist for determining the amount of rates prospectively ; these can only be estimated by reference to the amount in the year or years preceding. It would perhaps be most satisfactory in all cases to estimate the probable rates of the ensuing year at the exact amount of the year expiring immediately before the making of a rate ; but no objection could be maintained if the estimate was founded on an average of years immediately preceding (as, for instance, three years), provided that the average was always founded on the same number of years, terminating always at the time of making the rate, and that the same calculation was applied to all the rateable property in the same parish. The commissioners consider, however, that the calculation made on the year immediately preceding, will be preferable to any other.”

When the landlord or owner pays the rates and taxes on a composition, and consequently a less amount of rates is received by the parish than if the occupier paid them, the premises are to be valued, with a deduction in respect of such rates, as though the occupier paid the full amount : Dodd, app., Bilston, resps., L. R. 1 Q. B. 16 ; 6 B. & S. 903.

It is to be remembered that in ascertaining the rateable value of lands, a deduction is to be made in respect of the tithe rentcharge payable in respect of the land. Deduction of the tithe rentcharge. This is varying annually in amount, but in practice no change can be made in the rateable value of the hereditaments in consequence of such variation.

It was held that the occupier of lands, subject under a local Act to the payment of a rent to the vicar in lieu of commuted tithes, free of rates and taxes, was not entitled to a deduction in respect of such rent : Hackett, app., Long Bennington, resp., 9 L. T. 769 ; 33 L. J. M. C. 137.

The Poor Law Commissioners, in a minute dated November 29, 1841, pointed out an erroneous course which was occasionally adopted in reference to the deductions to be made, and which led to injustice between the different subjects of assessment. Minute of the Poor Law Commissioners as to the deduction for rates and taxes.

They said "It is desirable, with reference to every kind of rateable property, to determine how the deduction for rates and taxes is to be made. It appears that this deduction is sometimes made from the gross estimated rental. This practice is not apparently in accordance with the principle upon which the estimate is to be made ; and it will cause injustice in its application to property in proportion as the amount of outgoings for repairs, renovation, or insurance is greater or less."

They proceeded to illustrate by an example the result of this course ; and afterwards showed the result of a different course, namely, the calculation of the net annual value, where the rates have been estimated upon the gross rental, lessened by the deduction for the repairs and insurance.

It appeared by the second mode the rateable value on buildings is increased: on land little alteration is effected, but on tithes it is diminished.

They concluded, " that the second case is that which is conformable with the Parochial Assessments Act. For as rates cannot lawfully be made on the gross estimated rental, it would seem necessarily to follow that the estimate should not make an allowance for deduction of rates, on the false assumption that such rates will be made on the gross estimated rental. Neither can the deductions for rates be made from the 'net annual value,' as defined by the Parochial Assessments Act; for that net annual value is the result to be obtained as the effect of deducting the estimated rates, and does not pre-exist as a sum from which this deduction can be made. It remains, as the only possible conclusion, that the sum from which the estimated rates and taxes are to be deducted, in order to arrive at the 'net annual value,' or 'rateable value,' is the gross estimated rental of the property, less the expense of repairs and renovation," which virtually included insurance.

In a late case, the Court of Queen's Bench decided that the rates and taxes which a company claimed to have deducted, were not to be estimated upon that which was considered as the gross rental lessened by the various deductions claimed, but upon that only which was the net rateable value after the rates themselves had been deducted: Reg. v. The Tyne Improvement Commissioners, 6 L. T. (N. S.) 489; 32 L. J. M. C. 192.

A matter of much importance here requires attention. The valuation is to be made upon the property situated in the parish, because the rate is to be assessed thereon. For the most part there is no difficulty in carrying out this rule, though sometimes there may be a dispute as to the boundary between two parishes, which must be settled as a question of fact between the respective parishes. But difficulties do arise in respect of certain properties, which directly or by their ramifications extend into several parishes. Such are railways, canals, docks, waterworks, or gasworks, which frequently extend into numerous parishes.

The parochial and mileage valuation.

The principle of the law is, as far as possible, to ascertain the amount of occupation in each parish, and to value the same therein. Thus, the termini, stations, warehouses, engine-houses, and factories of a railway; the toll-houses, wharves, reservoirs, particular locks, and basins of canals; the sluices of artificial drainages; the gasometers, mains, engine-houses, and offices of gasworks, or the spring or head of water from which the water is drawn for supply by the water company, their reservoirs and forcing pumps, are usually fixed and established in particular parishes, so that the occupations of such portion of the properties can be separated and identified. They are to be valued accordingly in

and mileage valuation.

the particular parish or parishes where they are situated; and though the value of these parts of the general concern may be increased by reason of the connected parts which extend into other parishes, these latter parishes cannot bring such increase of value within their assessments. Thus, the value of a station in a parish is increased by the extension of the line of railway into several other parishes, whereby the traffic is increased, but those other parishes cannot impose any rate upon the station for their benefit, nor enhance the value of the part of the line which is situated in them by reason of such increase. Such increase in value is only to be estimated in the parish where the station exists.

Terminal charges, described in p. 91, above, are not, however, the subject of valuation in particular parishes, but are to be estimated in the value of the whole line: Reg. v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, ubi supra.

Again, certain portions of these works may be shown to produce their profit in particular parishes, being a part only of the whole extent traversed by them. Where it can be distinctly ascertained how much profit is earned in those parishes, independently of the aid from the residue, the value of the occupation in those parishes must be estimated for the assessment.

Thus, it has long been established in the rating of canals, that if it be shown that some portion of the profit is exclusively earned in one or two particular parishes, the valuation in respect thereof is to be confined to such parish or parishes.

Parochial
and mileage valuation.

So also, in a railway, a mileage division of the profits upon the whole line cannot be allowed as a correct mode of ascertaining the proportion belonging to each parish, unless every portion of the line be equally profitable. According to the strict theoretical rule of law, the amount earned in each parish, and the particular expenses incidental to the working of the railway occurring therein, must be ascertained, and the result will give the assessable value of the railway therein: Reg. v. Midland Railway Company, 4 N. S. C. 511; 15 Q. B. 313.

Again, where a series of docks and basins were situate in different parishes, for the use whereof duties were paid indiscriminately, it was held that the entire rateable value of the docks should be taken jointly, and be divided in proportion to the areas of the docks in the several parishes: Reg. v. Hull Dock Company, 16 Jur. 543; 21 L. J. R. M. C. 153.

But where, as in the case of the Mersey Docks, which are partly in the parish of Liverpool and partly in the township of Birkenhead, the earnings and outgoings of the two docks can be separately ascertained, though both are under one general management, the parochial, and not the average principle, must prevail: Mersey Docks' Board v. Liverpool, 37 J. P. 165.

In the case of waterworks there are two classes of property which produce the profit and constitute rate-

tion.

able subjects. First, the apparatus for raising the water, the reservoirs, land, buildings, and fixtures required for the general purposes of the undertaking. Secondly, the mains and service-pipes, and conduits which carry the water through the streets, and serve for its delivery to the consumer. The former indirectly conduces to produce the rateable value in particular parishes, but the latter produces it directly. The first portion is, however, the subject of assessment in the particular parish or parishes where it is situated, and the amount of the rate thereon when ascertained is deducted from the rateable value of the waterworks when taken as a whole. The spring from which the water arises is in like manner assessed in the parish where it exists. Then as to the residue of the rateable property, two bases are capable of adoption, viz., either the net profits earned in each parish, which would be the best criterion, or the amount of the land occupied by the mains and service-pipes therein, which is to be measured by reference to the extent and capacity of those mains and pipes. The profits are measured by reference to the gross receipts in each parish, which generally depend upon the extent therein of the mains and pipes. Reg. v. Mile End Old Town, 3 N. S. C. 13; 11 Jur. 988; 10 Q. B. 208; 16 L. J. R. M. C. 184. But the value of the whole apparatus in all the parishes in which it is situated is not to be ascertained and then divided among them according to the quantity of land occupied by it in each parish, because, if so, though the value of the land might vary, the value of the apparatus would be the same in the different parishes : Chelsea Waterworks Company, apps., Putney, resp.,

6 Jur. (N.S.) 940; 29 L. J. R. M. C. 236; 3 E. & E. 108; 24 J. P. 486.

Parochial
and mileage valuation.

The amount of capital laid out in the particular parish is not to form the basis of the calculation, because that may not have been judiciously laid out, or may not produce a corresponding amount of profit: Reg. v. Mile End Old Town, ubi supra.

It has been considered that in valuing the parts of the works in the different parishes, an estimate might be made not only of the direct profits in the parishes respectively but also the indirect profits, namely, those which are earned in the one parish by reason of the apparatus in another. But this rule appears to be erroneous in cases of water and gasworks, as it has been shewn to be in the case of railways.

The buildings, plant, and mains erected in the parish where no receipts are earned, are, however, only to be assessed on their value as land and buildings, with fixtures and machinery, deriving some additional value from their capacity of being applied to such purposes as a water company, but not with reference to receipts in other parishes, except that they may be assumed to be sufficient to pay for all outgoings and profits on the capital of the company: Reg. v. West Middlesex Waterworks Company, 1 E. & E. 716; 28 L. J. M. C. 135. The same rule was held to apply to gasworks: Sheffield United Gaslight Company v. Sheffield, 4 B. & S. 135; 8 L. T. (N.S.) 692; 37 J. P. 429.

The case of the Proprietors of the Birmingham Canal Navigation v. Birmingham, 19 L. T. (N.S.) 311, may be referred to in regard to canals ; but it is not easy to determine the point actually decided in that case from the report.

and mile-

It may result, however, from the principle of this rule that the company might escape the rate wholly, or to a large extent because the rateable value of the apparatus in the several parishes estimated separately may be almost inappreciable, though in combination a great profit is gained.

But when there is no means of sub-dividing the gain or profit earned in the several parishes, the whole is to be taken together, and, the profit being uniform, the value in each parish will depend upon the extent of the occupation therein. Hence, the entire works must be measured, and the whole value of the occupation be divided rateably among the parishes in proportion to the extent of the occupation in each parish.

And practically there is so much difficulty in carrying the principle into operation as regards many canals and most railways, that in the cases of those properties the parochial scale is often abandoned, and the mileage system adopted in its place.

The difficulty of ascertaining the proper apportioned values in different parishes is stated distinctly by BLACKBURN, J., in Guest v. East Dean, L. R. 7 Q. B. 341 ; 41 L. J. M. C. 129 ; 26 L. T. (N. S.) 442 ; 36 J. P. 342, where he refers to the case of a spring of water, a main-pipe, and a supply, all in separate parishes, each by itself of no value, but the combination producing a very large rent. In the case before him arose the question as to the rating of surface lands with buildings used for the purpose of working a metalliferous mine, such land and buildings being rateable, while the mine itself was exempt. The land would be of little value without the mine, and the mine would be of little value without the surface, but both together were of great value. The principle to be adopted is stated ante, p. 79.

Parochial

tion.

Where a coal mine is worked in two parishes, the value of the separate portions must be ascertained as far as possible distinctly, and must be taken according to the extent of the works respectively; and though the pit and the shaft be in one only, the value is not to be taken to be wholly in that parish: Rex v. Foleshill, 2 A. & E. 593. In some parts of the mining districts a certain sum is assessed by way of tonnage upon the coal raised, and this sum is made to cover the value of the buildings and engines used for the purposes of the mine, there being no specific assessment upon the latter. This, if not strictly correct, is nevertheless so convenient that it is not unnecessarily to be disturbed. But it cannot be carried out when the mine and the works are not wholly in the same parish; because the property must be assessed in respect of each parish according to the extent of the occupation therein. Hence, the works must be assessed in the usual manner, and the coal according to the yield. See the remarks on the rating of collieries on p. 60.

Some railways, and doubtless some other works, though not of sufficient importance to create any discussion on this point, consist of trunk lines and branches,—that is, main lines, for which the original railway was designed, and branch lines which it has been subsequently deemed advisable to form. The rate of profit with reference to the cost and expenses of the separate parts, is seldom uniform on the whole. On some branches there may be great expense peculiar to them in the working; on others, the traffic being less, the profits may also be smaller than on the trunk. To the company it is generally, though not always immaterial whether the trunk and the branches be taken together, and one uniform valuation be taken for the whole, or whether they be severed and valued separately.

Railways,

The latter course would be most consistent with the rule above stated with reference to the parochial charge, and to that the courts of law strongly lean. But it has been found impracticable always to adopt this course; and in one of the cases before the Court of Queen's Bench, it was held that if the branch be incorporated into the whole line, and worked as an undistinguished part, the valuation must be made with reference to the whole—viz., the trunk and branch, and cannot be confined to the latter: Reg. v. The Great Western Railway Company, 15 Q. B. 379, 1085.

Where there is, however, such a distinction and separation kept up between the trunk and the branch as to enable the value of the latter to be ascertained without reference to the former, the value of the two for the purposes of the assessment must be kept distinct: Id. In assessing to the poor rate a part of a branch line of railway passing through a parish, the ^{Railways.} fact that three other companies would be willing to pay what was equivalent to a large rent for it, is to be taken into account as an element in ascertaining the rent at which it might reasonably be expected to let from year to year : Reg. v. London and North Western Railway Company, L. R. 9 Q. B. 134; 43 L. J. M. C. 81; 29 L. T. (N.S.) 910. It is now established, as shown above, p. 94, that where the branch line is worked at a loss, it is not assessable.

It follows, however, from the general rule, that in the ^{Canals.} case of a canal the expenses of maintaining locks necessary for the whole canal are not to be charged to the parish wherein they are situated, but are to be thrown upon the whole line of the canal : Reg. v. The Coventry Canal Company, E. & E. 572; 28 L. J. M. C. 102; 23 J. P. 100.

It is proper to notice, as a further illustration of ^{Bridges.} this principle, that a bridge, maintained by tolls, having its approaches and its two ends in different parishes, must be valued, in reference to the two parishes, in proportion to the extent of the bridge itself in each parish, whatever may be the relative extent of the respective approaches; and where the middle of the stream is the boundary of the parishes, the value of the bridge in each parish will be equal : Reg. v. The Hammersmith Bridge Company, 1 N. S. C. 424; 15 Q. B. 369; 13 J. P. 103; 18 L. J. M. C. 85.

The practical rule which is generally applicable to this class of cases is thus laid down by the court in the case last referred to :—" If the entirety of the works can be divided into two parts, the first directly producing the value, and the second indirectly conducting to such production, such division should be made. Then all expenses incidental to the second part, including the rates to which it may be liable, being deducted from the gross proceeds, and the net rateable value being ascertained, such value is to be apportioned among the districts to which the first part, viz., the part directly producing the value, is situate, in the ratio of the portion of that value produced in each district."

Where there were landing-places to a ferry across a tidal river or estuary, not situate in any parish, which were assessable, no estimate could be made of their value with reference to the width of the river, as the line of passage varied, and did not run in a straight line, and, moreover, could not be said to occupy any part of either parish : Reg. v. North & South Shields Ferry Company, 22 L. J. R. (N. S.) M. C. 9 ; 1 E. & B. 140 ; 17 J. P. 21.

The meaning of the proviso to this section, as to the relative liabilities of property.

Thus far, as to the substance of the enactment ; but the proviso has caused much discussion. It was introduced to prevent the question, which was supposed to be raised by the decision in Rex v. Joddrell, 1 B. & Ad. 403, from being concluded by the terms of the statute. But it is so expressed that the Court of Queen's Bench, in Reg. v. Capel, 12 A. & E. 283 have stated that they do not understand its meaning or effect, and, in the decision of that case, held that it did not control the rule which the statute in the previous part of the section had prescribed for the valuation of all hereditaments.

The point which was raised in Reg. v. Capel, as resulting from Rex v. Joddrell, was this, that in the assessment upon tithes a deduction should be made, with reference to the deduction which, it was contended, was always made in the assessment of land in regard to the profits of the farmer. It was urged that the tithe-owner was assessed upon the full value of his tithe; whereas, the occupiers of the lands and buildings being assessed upon the rent only, and not also upon the profits of their occupation, were not equally assessed as regarded him. Either, therefore, their assessments ought to have been raised, or an allowance ought to have been made to the tithe-owner.

tithes.

The court were, however, of opinion that the tithe-owner, having been assessed expressly according to the terms of this statute, could not claim any other deduction than what had been made, and, as no objection had been made to the other persons assessed, on the ground of inequality, the rate was good. If this objection had been made, the question would then have arisen as to the proper valuation of the property occupied by such persons, but would not have affected the correctness of the valuation of the tithe for the assessment.

It was made a subject of complaint that no deduction was made in the valuation of the tithe in respect of the tithe owner's expense in maintaining himself and procuring the clerical duties to be performed; and it was urged that the farmer and other inhabitants were not assessed upon the profit they derived from the employment of their capital on the premises occupied. But it was answered that there was nothing at that time to prevent the tithe-owner from requiring those persons to be assessed upon their profit; and the mere wrongful omission to rate other property, could not give a right to the occupier of any particular property to have a deduction made in the valuation of his property, in respect of some cost or expense incurred by himself, not authorized by the statute to be deducted.

It will be seen above to what extent the Court of Queen's Bench has considered that allowances can and cannot be made in respect of the parson's personal labours, and that of his curate in discharge of the duties of his cure.

General statement of the principle of assessing tithes.

The principal of rating tithe is thus settled with reference to this Act. The amount of rentcharge is to be taken for the current year, as estimated by the official declaration of the corn averages. From this sum deduction must be made. (1.) For the expenses of collection by a reasonable per-centage. (2.) For the average annual amount of losses. (3.) For the average annual cost of legal proceedings for the recovery of the tithe rentcharges. (4.) For additional allowance in respect of a lessee's profit, if not included in the previous allowances. (5.) For the tenant's rates and taxes, payable out of the same (the land tax not being one, but the tenant's property tax being one, when the same is actually levied). (6.) For the ecclesiastical dues, payable out of the benefice proportionately to the whole income. (7.) For the average annual cost of the repair of the chancel.

Hitherto it has been assumed that the property to be rated must be and continue to be occupied, so as to be capable of producing profit. But land may be taken possession of for the execution of works, and for a time will be wholly unprofitable. Where this occurs in private enterprises, the parish will lose for a time the rate on the land. But as regards public enterprises the legislature have made a special provision in the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 133, in the following words :—"If the promoters of the undertaking become possessed by virtue of this or the special Act, or any Act incorporated therewith, of any lands liable to be assessed to the poor's rate, they shall, from time to time, until the works shall be completed and assessed to such poor's rate, be liable to make good the deficiency in the several assessments for poor's rate, by reason of such lands having been taken or used for the purposes of the works, and such deficiency shall be computed according to the rental at which such lands, with any building thereon, were valued or rated at the time of the passing of the special Act; and on demand of such deficiency, the promoters of the undertaking or their treasurer, shall pay all such deficiencies to the collector of the said assessment." Under this provision the promoters are not liable to be rated for the amount : Corporation of London v. St. Andrew, Holborn, L. R. 2 C. P. 574; 36 L. J. M. C. 95; 16 L. T. (N. S.) 665, but they are liable to a civil action at the

Some doubts have arisen as to what constitutes "the completion of the works" in cases of railways. Where a railway runs through several parishes and is completed in one so as to be available for traffic, but the whole scheme of the railway is not completed, it is nevertheless not so far completed as to render the statute inapplicable : Reg. v. Metropolitan District Railway Company, L. R. 6 Q. B. 698 ; 40 L. J. M. C. 113 ; Whitchurch v. East London Railway Company, 26 L. T. 635. The decision of the Exchequer Chamber, overruling that of the Court of Exchequer, in this last case established the rule to be as stated above.

Soon after the passing of the statute now under comment it was contended, that the use of the word hereditament, and the whole context of the Act, showed that the rating of stock-in-trade which prevailed in some parts of England was determined by it. The Court of Queen's Bench, in Reg v. Lunsdaine, 10 A. & E. 157, decided the contrary. But the difficulty and impolicy of assessing this kind of property was shown in several documents issued by the Poor Law Commissioners, and by the evidence of the late Sir George Cornewall Lewis, Bart., given before the Committee of the House of Lords on Parochial Assessments which sat in 1850. Hence the legislature, by a temporary Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 89), continued annually, and last by the 44 & 45 Vict. c. 70, have suspended the power of assessing it until the 31st day of December, 1882.

The enactment of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 89, is as ^{Stock-in-} follows :—_{trade.}

An Act to exempt, until the Thirty-first day of December, One thousand eight hundred and forty-one, inhabitants of parishes, townships, and villages from liability to be rated as such, in respect of stock-in-trade or other property, to the relief of the poor.

[10th August, 1840.]

“ WHEREAS by an Act passed in the forty-third year of ^{43 Eliz.} the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled ‘ An Act for the _{c. 2.} Relief of the Poor,’ it was amongst other things provided that the overseers of every parish should raise, by taxation of every inhabitant, parson, vicar, and other, and of every occupier of lands, houses, tithes impropriate, propriations of tithes, coal mines, or saleable underwoods, in the said parish, in such competent sum or sums of money as they shall think fit, a convenient stock of necessary ware and stuff to set the poor on work, and also competent sums of money for and towards the relief of the poor not able to work, and also for the putting out of poor children to be apprentices, to be gathered out of the same parish according to the ability of the same : And whereas by another Act passed in the session of parliament holden in the thirteenth and ^{13 & 14} fourteenth years of the reign of King Charles the _{Car. 2,} Second, intituled ‘ An Act for the better Relief of the _{c. 12.} Poor of this Kingdom,’ the provisions of the said Act of Elizabeth were extended to certain townships and villages : And whereas by reason of the provisions of the said Acts, it has been held that inhabitants of parishes, townships, and villages, as such inhabitants, are liable in respect of their ability derived from the profits of stock-in-trade and of other property, to be taxed for and towards the relief of the poor; and it is expedient to repeal the liability of inhabitants, as such, to be taxed:" Be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act it shall not be lawful for the overseers of any parish, township, or village, to tax any inhabitant thereof, as such inhabitant in respect of his ability derived from the profits of stock-in-trade or any other property, for or towards the relief of the poor.

"Provided always, That nothing in this Act contained shall in anywise affect the liability of any parson or vicar, or of any occupier of lands, houses, tithes impropriate, propriations of tithes, coal mines, or saleable underwoods, to be taxed under the provisions of the said Acts for or towards the relief of the poor.

2. "And be it enacted, that this Act shall be in force till the 31st day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1841, and that from the said 31st day of December this Act and all the provisions hereinbefore contained shall absolutely cease and be of no effect."

Property exempt from rateability.

The Parochial Assessment Act deals only with property which is rateable, and in the earlier editions of this work the commentary was confined to remarks upon such property. But it was considered in the last edition that it would be convenient to explain briefly what property is not rateable, being that which indeed is excluded from the operation of the statute.

Now, to render property rateable to the poor rate under the Act of 43 Eliz. c. 2, there must be an occupier, and the occupation must be of such a nature as to produce, or be capable of producing, profit. It was also considered, as the result of a long series of decisions, that the nature of the occupation should be such as the law would hold to be beneficial. This word does not appear in the above statute of Elizabeth, but it is found in the statute 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48, s. 2 (now repealed by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 30). By beneficial occupation for the purposes of the law of rating was meant an occupation from which the occupier derived either a pecuniary profit or some personal advantage or convenience; and where this was negatived, there was no beneficial occupation. See Report of the Committee of the House of Commons on Exemptions from Rates in 1858.

This personal advantage did not necessarily import a gain to the person who was to be assessed, but a gain must have resulted to some definite person.

The proper construction of the statute of Elizabeth in this respect has, however, been laid down by the House of Lords in a different manner, so that the principle of beneficial occupation as a necessary requisite to the liability to assessment has been overruled, and must be abandoned: Jones v. The Mersey Docks Company; The Mersey Docks v. Cameron, 35 L. J. M. C. 1; 20 C. B. (N.S.) 56; Commissioners of Leith Harbour, apps., Inspector of Poor, resp., L. R. 1 Sc. App. 17.

The exemptions, therefore, from the liability to local rates, which arise under the existing law, may be divided into two classes :—1. Exemptions created by statute. 2. Exemptions on account of the prerogative of the Crown, and of the government of the country.

Where there is no beneficial occupation.

Two classes of exempted property.

Churches and chapels.

Literary and scien-

The most important exemptions of the first class are those established by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30 (see Appendix), which exempts all churches, chapels, and other places of religious worship from poor rate, and by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, which exempts lands and buildings occupied by scientific or literary societies from poor and other local rates. Special exemption is made in respect of Sunday and ragged schools by the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40 (as to which see post, p. 143). There are likewise other statutory exemptions for turnpike tolls and toll-houses and for certain lighthouses, vested in the Trinity House Commissioners.

The exemption of the societies above referred to is modified by various provisions which will be found in the statute.

Property held for public

The second class of exemptions arise from the application of the legal rule which prevents the King or the Crown from being liable to pay rates and taxes, where not expressly named, and this rule comprehends all property held for the general purposes of the government of the country. (See the judgment of the House of Lords in the case of the Mersey Docks, above cited.) Thus, all lands and buildings in the personal occupation of the Sovereign are exempt from local rates, and this exemption extends not only to the royal palaces, but also to the royal parks and pleasure grounds and farms.

But the exemption does not exist in these places when the occupation is not that of the Sovereign. There-^{Public purposes.}fore, the persons who occupy apartments at Hampton Court by permission of the Sovereign, are liable to the assessment: Reg. v. Lady E. Ponsonby, 3 Q. B. 14; 11 L. J. M. C. 65. And the ranger of a royal park is rateable in respect of any profit which he makes out of the enclosed and cultivated part: Bute, Earl of, v. Grindall, 1 T. R. 338. By the Victoria Local Government Act, 1874, s. 253: "All land shall be rateable property except land the property of Her Majesty which is unoccupied or used for public purposes;" and on appeal from the Supreme Court of the colony of Victoria, the judicial committee of the Privy Council held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that land used as a racecourse, under a demise from the Crown to the Victoria Racing Club for 99 years at a peppercorn rentcharge in trust for the club and for the purposes of the Victoria Racing Club Act, 1871, was rateable, as the land was not within the exemption, not being used solely for public purposes without any beneficial occupation by individuals: Essendon, Mayor, &c., of v. Blackwood, 36 L. T. (N.S.) 625; L. R. 2 P. C. 547; 42 J. P. 180.

Again, all lands and buildings belonging to the Crown, and occupied for a national purpose, such as^{Government property.} forts, fortifications, dockyards, arsenals, barracks, naval and military storehouses (see as to the Militia, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 105, s. 2, and as to the Volunteers, 26 & 27 Vict. c. 65, s. 26), and hospitals, guard-houses, workshops and factories for artisans employed in naval and military works, military colleges, artillery and parade-grounds, government prisons, buildings used for the business of public departments, custom houses and post-offices (Reg. v. Smith, 26 L. J. M. C. 105; 7 E. & B. 483), are for this reason exempt. So also are official residences where they are necessary for the discharge of the duties of the public officer. See the above cited report of the House of Commons. Government museums are also exempt: De la Beche v. St. James, Westminster, 4 E. & B. 385. So also the Royal Academy, when held at the National Gallery, was adjudged to be exempt on this ground: Reg. v. Sir M. A. Shee, 4 A. & E. 2. But an industrial school certified under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 118, s. 7, and to which the treasury contributes under sect. 25, is liable to be rated to the relief of the poor: Reg. v. West Derby, 32 L. T. (N.S.) 400; W. N. 1875, p. 98; L. R. 10 Q. B. 283; 44 L. J. M. C. 98.

ties.

The public universities are not exempt as royal or national property. (See as to the University of Edinburgh, Greig v. The University of Edinburgh, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 348.)

County and muni-
perty.

Buildings and lands occupied by municipal or other public bodies for such public purposes, as county gaols (now Her Majesty's prisons), reformatories, judges' lodgings, court-houses, and police-stations are within the exemption, as are also public roads and bridges: Reg. v. St. Martin's, Leicester; Reg. v. Castle View, L. R. 2 Q. B. 493; Reg. v. Justices of Lancashire, 27 L. J. M. C. 305.

Where profit is made from the use of certain premises within the above description for purposes other than those of a national character, they are pro tanto liable to assessment: Lancashire JJ. v. Cheetham, L. R. 3 Q. B. 14; 37 L. J. M. C. 12; 31 J. P. 739; 3 B. & S. 548.

When the principle of exemption on the ground of ^{Corporation} public purposes prevailed, municipal property which ^{property.} was appropriated to public purposes was held not to be rateable. By express statute that decision was qualified, and by the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 48, the property of the borough was rendered rateable.

The statute, however, contained a proviso that where the property is in a parish situate wholly within the borough, and in which the poor are relieved by one entire poor rate, or in which borough the poor are there relieved by one entire poor rate, the exemption was to continue as if the Act had not passed. This was a positive enactment, and created an exemption in all parishes falling within the description, notwithstanding the overruling of the principle of beneficial occupation, and the establishment of union chargeability: Reg. v. Oldham, L. R. 3 Q. B. 474; 37 L. J. M. C. 169; but, as already shown, ante, p. 137, this exemption was repealed by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 30.

While the doctrine of beneficial occupation prevailed it was nevertheless held that property used for the benefit of a limited district only was rateable, if it were situated either out of the district, or in a parish which formed part of that district, as in the case of a work-house situated out of the parish for which it is required, or in one of the parishes of the union for which it is provided: Guardians of the Poor of Bristol v. Wait, 5 A. & E. 1; Reg. v. Guardians of Wallingford Union, 10 A. & E. 259; or of waterworks in a parish which supply water for the use of a town or particular properties situated in another parish: Reg. v. Longwood, 13 Q. B. 116; Reg. v. Kentmere, 17 Q. B. 551; Reg. v. Overseers of Manchester, 17 Q. B. 859; Mayor of Liverpool v. Overseers of West Derby, 6 E. & B. 704; or of land hired by a gaoler for the employment of convicts beyond the precincts of the prison: Gambier v. Overseers of Lydford, 3 E. & B. 346; or of land occupied by a local board of health in a parish partly out of the district: Reg. v. Cooper, 4 E. & B. 29. But as the general doctrine of beneficial occupation has been overruled, these cases have ceased to be of importance.

In like manner property held and occupied purely for purposes of charity, such as public hospitals or reformatories, was held to be exempt, inasmuch as no beneficial occupation or emolument resulted from them in any personal or private respect to the managers or governors thereof, or to any other persons having any fixed occupation: Reg. v. St. George, Southwark, 10 Q. B. 852. So also the premises occupied by missionary societies for the deposit of their stock of publications were exempt: Reg. v. Wilson, 12 A. & E. 94. These exemptions now fail, as the ground of the exemption has been set aside as unfounded: Trustees of Ilkley Hospital v. Ilkley Overseers; Reg. v. The Trustees of the British Orphan Asylum, 41st vol. of L. T. page 42. So also, in the case of St. Thomas's Hospital which was founded by charter of Edward VI., and lands were given, and the funds arising from the property vested for the purposes of the charter in the mayor and corporation of London. The charter directed the appointment and payment of the officers necessary for such an establishment, and directed that the residue of the revenues should be spent for "the use and maintenance of the poor, sick, and infirm folk of the said hospital." It was held by the House of Lords that the rule laid down in the cases of The Mersey Docks v. Cameron, 11 H. L. Ca. 443 (vol. 1., pp. 33, 34), and Greig v. University of Edinburgh, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 348 (vol. 1., p. 22), applied, and that St. Thomas' Hospital was liable to be rated to the poor rate: London, Mayor of, v. Stratton, L. R. 7 E. & I. App. 477; 40 J. P. 244; 45 L. J. M. C. 23. See also 30 L. T. (N.S.) 37, in error from the Queen's Bench.

The trustees of schools for poor children, where profit Schools. was derived from the scholars, or from any occupation of the building, were indeed held, before the decision in the House of Lords, liable to be assessed: Reg. v. Sterry, 12 A. & E. 84; Reg. v. Governors of Licensed Victuallers' Society, 1 E. B. & S. 71; 4 L. T. (N. S.) 241; 30 L. J. M. C. 131; Laughlin v. Overseers of Saffron Hill, 12 L. T. (N.S.) 542.

But a special provision has been since made in respect of Sunday and ragged schools. By the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40, the authorities who can impose or levy rates may exempt such buildings from the rate. They are authorised but are not compelled to exempt, and may exercise a discretion: Bell v. Crane, 29 L. T. (N.S.) 207; 42 L. J. M. C. 122; L. R. 8 Q. B. 481. See Appendix.

houses.

Alms-houses, in like manner, had been held not exempt, so that the almsmen who occupy them are rateable, if the trustees do not prefer to have the assessment laid in their names: Rex v. Green, 9 B. & C. 203.

Occupation in

But in all the establishments which are still exempt, if there be an occupation by any officer, assistant, or servant, beyond that which is reasonably required for the discharge of his duties in such office or service, his occupation is not that of the Crown or government, but becomes so far beneficial to him as to render him liable to be assessed: Reg. v. Gambier, 3 E. & B. 346; Reg. v. Stewart, 27 L. J. R. M. C. 81; Reg. v. Breton, 8 E. & B. 363; Reg. v. Bridgehouse, 20 L. T. 658.

certain canal and

In conclusion, it must be observed, that the legislature in several private or local Acts, whereby canal or navigation or dock trustees have been empowered to make canals or docks, or to improve the navigation of public rivers, used such language in providing for the application of the receipts of the trustees, as induced the courts to hold that, by reason of that application extending only to objects of a public nature, there was an exemption from local rates: Rex v. Salter's Load Sluice Navigation, 4 T. R. 730; Rex v. Liverpool, 7 B. & C. 61; Mersey Docks Company v. Jones, 30 L. J. R. M. C. 239; 5 L. T. (N.S.) 184; S. C. Mersey Docks v. Cameron, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 812.

The interpretation of the court in these cases had been much questioned of late, and the exemption had been rejected wherever the court could find ground for distinguishing the case from those decisions; Reg. v. Trustees of Birkenhead Docks, 2 E. & B. 148; Reg. v. Chirton, E. & E. 516; 28 L. J. R. M. C. 131.

As already noticed, this doctrine, upon which those cases were decided, had been overruled, and unless there be an express exemption in the Act, the court cannot now hold the exemption to exist.

Thus far of general exemptions. But it is right to state that some statutes have created a partial exemption only, as by providing that lands taken for certain purposes, and afterwards built upon or applied to purposes of a public character, shall only continue rateable according to the state of the land when so appropriated, in like proportion as agricultural land in the neighbourhood may continue to be valued at. Some instances exist of statutory exemptions, as in the case of Serjeant's Inn, Chancery Lane, the result of certain compromises, as where a gross sum is paid in respect of a district, and the whole of the otherwise rateable property therein is exempt: Thorpe v. Adams, 40 L. J. M. C. 52; L. R. 6 C. P. 125; 23 L. T. (N.S.) 810. Many of the cases where particular works or property have been so exempted, depend upon the express wording of the local Acts under which they were established, and the cases cannot here be introduced. But the Lunatic Asylums Act, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 35, contains such an exemption in respect of land taken for the sites of those asylums. The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 15, as already noticed, contains a similar one in respect of a burial ground, provided in a parish for the use and benefit of another parish. By the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 112, s. 33, lands vested in the Secretary of State for the defence of the realm previously liable and charged with poor rates, are to continue chargeable therewith, but shall not be assessed at a higher value than at the time of such vesting.

And the telegraphs purchased by the Government under the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 110, are required, by s. 22, to be assessed in the like manner and to the like extent. But the rates made upon the basis of the approved valuation lists cannot be enforced against the postmaster-general: Reg. v. Postmaster-General, 37 J. P. 196; 28 L. T. (N.S.) 337.

COMMENTARY ON THE SECOND SECTION.

The form in the schedule will be found to correspond very nearly with the form of the rate book prescribed by the Poor Law Commissioners at the commencement of their labours, and which is printed in their first annual report.

In that form they introduced two columns for the number of votes to be given to the occupiers and the number for the owners. This was done to afford a means of complying with the provisions of the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, and the Vestries Act, 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, which gave the plurality of votes in proportion to the amount of rateable property. In sect. 40 of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, it is provided that when an owner made a claim to vote, he should send a description of the property in respect of which he claimed to vote, and some other particulars, and the overseers were required to enter in the rate book, or in some other book, the names and addresses of such owners. Hence the column in the rate book was provided for such owners. From the statements the overseers could learn who were owners, but otherwise they could not have necessarily any knowledge on the subject.

In lapse of time the origin and intention of this column have been lost, and now the overseers fill it up upon such information as can be cursorily supplied, or with such knowledge as they may possess.

It was considered that after prescribing the precise mode in which the estimate of the rateable value should be made, and the form in which the assessment should be made out, the legislature intended that no rate should be valid which deviated from that form, and that therefore the justices, who are required to allow poor rates, would not be justified in allowing any rate which deviated from the form so prescribed. But the Court of Queen's Bench decided that such is not the effect of the statute; that if the parish officers do not sign the declaration which is at the foot of the rate, by which they vouch to the correctness of the rate, the rate is void, and the justices may refuse to allow it; but that if there be merely some defect of form, or if it be in the opinion of the justices inaccurate in respect to the valuation of the property, they nevertheless have no discretion, and cannot refuse to allow it: Reg. v. Earl of Yarborough, 12 A. & E. 416.

It made no difference that a valuation of the parish had been made under the power given by the next clause of this Act, and that the overseers had departed from that valuation. The justices could not on this ground refuse to allow the rate [Ibid.], for the allowance of a poor rate by the justices is purely a ministerial act, and if it be good on the face of it, they cannot inquire into its validity: Reg. v. Lord Godolphin, 13 L. J. M. C. 57.

The declaration prescribed by this section must be made, otherwise the rate will not be valid, but the declaration need not have been in the precise words set out in the schedule: Painter v. Reg., 10 Q. B. 908.

This has been altered by the provision of the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, which requires a new declaration to be made, and renders the rate void if it departs from the valuation approved by the committee. See the Appendix.

Meaning of the pro-

The proviso to this clause appears to have been misplaced; it should have formed a separate clause, or have been appended to the first clause. It left untouched the compositions for assessments, which exist under the 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, and under many local Acts, but required the gross estimated rental to be entered in the proper column, though, as already observed, it did not explain what that rental signifies.

The clause requires the particulars referred to to be "in addition to any other particular which the form of making out such rate shall require to be set forth." It does not appear that there was any requisition on this subject beyond that which had been set forth by the Poor Law Commissioners, and as that power is here recognized, those Commissioners in their general order of accounts, and the Poor Law Board afterwards, provided not only columns for the collection, but also for cases where the composition is paid by the owners.

The general provision contained in the 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, as to compounding for rates, was confined to cases where the tenements are let at between 6*l.* and 20*l.*, and for less terms than a year; and the section has no application to houses let at a rent exceeding 20*l.* or less than 6*l.* a year: Iles, app., Assessment Committee West Ham Union, resps., W. N. 1881, p. 136; L. J. Rep. M. C. 1882. In many parishes there were local Acts which extended the amount of the rent at which compositions might be made, and omitted the low limit; and the statute 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, introduced a mode by which any parish could rate the owners of property not exceeding the yearly rateable value of 6*l.*, instead of the occupiers. But that statute, and all the local Acts which contained these provisions, have been repealed by the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 6, with reference to the poor rate.

c. 12, as to

The 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, was in effect repealed by the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 7, in respect of parishes situated wholly or partly within a parliamentary borough, but otherwise it has been left unrepealed. It is, however, not extensively in force elsewhere.

COMMENTARY ON THE THIRD SECTION.

Overseers could not previously cause a parish to be valued. Previous to the passing of this Act, it does not appear that the overseers could have put the parish to the expense of a map or valuation of the rateable property therein. The inhabitants might, indeed, have appointed a person under the 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7, as an assistant overseer, and assigned to him the duty of valuing the parish and making the assessment. This, however, was an artificial process, which was probably never adopted before this Act was passed.

A mode often adopted formerly was for the vestry to appoint members to constitute a committee to revise the rate and the valuation upon which it was formed, and to report the result to the vestry. The overseers were expected to adopt this report, though the law does not allow the power given to them by the statute of Elizabeth to make the assessment to be taken away from them by any such proceeding of the vestry. This proceeding was considered favourably by the Poor Law Commissioners in their letter of 19th Sept., 1837, 4th An. Rep., p. 164. But experience showed that such a committee seldom produced a satisfactory result to the parish. It was difficult to insure strict impartiality in its proceedings, or at least to secure perfect confidence therein, and the Poor Law Board discouraged such course of action. They could not prevent the formation of the committee, but such committee had no authority to charge the poor rate with any expenses; the board could render no assistance to enable such expenses to be so paid, and neither the overseers nor the ratepayers were in any way bound by the valuation made by such committee.

The new Act for the appointment of the assessment committee of the union nowhere recognizes or authorizes the appointment of a parish committee.

The present section, however, gave a mode of proceeding so as to secure a correct valuation of any parish, and, where necessary, an accurate map. But it could only be carried into effect by an order of the Poor Law Board, and as their order must have directed the guardians to appoint the valuer, it is manifest that the clause could only operate where a parish was in a union, or was under the management of a board of guardians. It will appear hereafter that the union here mentioned was not confined to those formed under the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834.

Valuation to be obtained by order of the Poor Law Board under this Act.

It is right to observe that some doubt has been expressed as to the real meaning of the statute in this clause. It has been intimated by the Court of Queen's Bench that perhaps it signifies that either the guardians of the union or the officers of the particular parish may apply, and that the order of the Poor Law Board should be addressed to the guardians or the officers according to their application. But the court did not decide this point. (see Reg. v. The Churchwardens and Overseers of Bangor, 10 Q. B. 91; 16 L. J. M. C. 58; 11 J. P. 260); and in the uncertainty as to the proper construction of the Act, the Poor Law Board continued the previous practice, and issued their order to the guardians.

It was necessary that the churchwardens and overseers should declare that a new valuation was necessary to enable a fair and correct estimate of the rateable property in the parish to be made. But since the Union Assessment Committee Act has been passed and has come into operation, the Poor Law Board have determined that the churchwardens and overseers cannot make this declaration correctly, as they are bound to follow the last approved valuation list in making out the poor rate. Hence the board declined to issue orders under this section, and the Local Government Board hold the same rule. On reference to that Act and the amending statute, it will be seen that adequate means are now provided for obtaining a valuation of the rateable property of every parish and, where necessary, a map.

board to

The board, at their discretion, could have issued the order which was to direct the guardians to procure the valuation to be made. They had also a power to require a map or plan to be made, if they thought fit, and upon such a scale as they might deem proper, They could in no other way prescribe the form of the valuation or of the map; and this form in strictness was to be settled by the guardians.

Neither the parish officers nor the ratepayers could, under this clause, insist upon appointing the surveyor, or prescribing the mode in which the map and valuation were to be made, or the terms upon which it was to be made. The Union Assessment Committee Acts, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, make some difference in this respect.

The guardians are to appoint the surveyor.

The contract must have been executed by the affixing of the common seal of the guardians, as this was not a contract by which they could be held legally responsible, except it be under seal: Paine v. The Guardians of the Strand Union, 8 Q. B. 326. And as they would not have been bound except by a contract under seal, so also the surveyor would not have been liable upon a mere verbal contract or engagement, even in writing, if it were without seal.

It is obvious that the commissioners, having the opportunity of communicating with all the unions and parishes in the kingdom, had the best means of ascertaining the form of contract most convenient for the guardians to enter into, for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the parties; and, consequently, they framed forms of contracts, which they usually recommended for adoption; and as this form, and the considerations which arise out of it, appear to be very applicable to the guardians, who now make contracts under the Union Assessment Committee Acts for the same purpose, it has been deemed advisable to retain the remarks which were made in relation to the contract in former editions.

Almost simultaneously with the earliest of the valuations made under this Act, the commutation of tithes under the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, took place in different parishes; and it became an object with the Poor Law Commissioners to make one survey and map answer the purposes of the commutation of the tithes and of the parochial assessment.

the map.

They therefore ascertained the general requisites of the tithe commissioners, and transmitted copies of those requisites to the various boards of guardians. The scale prescribed by those commissioners for the map, viz., three chains to an inch, in rural parishes, was almost universally adopted, and no deviation allowed except under special circumstances; though in towns a larger scale was generally required. The form of contract recommended by the board was so framed as to secure a map for the parish, such as the tithes commissioners would confirm.

The statute which authorizes the procuring of a plan appears to signify a plan of the whole parish. But it sometimes happened that the parish was so diversified in its character as to require different scales for the different parts. In such a case the board considered that the whole parish must be mapped upon the smaller uniform scale, while a larger scale might be used for parts of the parish mapped in other supplemental plans.

Where a parish was so large that the map of the whole would have been inconvenient, it was suggested that the parish should be divided and the separate portions shown on distinct plans. But the map once made, was required never to be folded. Generally, they recommended the map to be well varnished, mounted, and framed.

As the guardians might not have been competent to determine the actual geometrical accuracy of the map, the commissioners recommended in the form of their contract that the contract should be approved of by them before it was paid for. They thus relieved the guardians of some part of their responsibility, inasmuch as they undertook an examination of the scientific part of the performance.

To enable them to express their opinion upon the sufficiency of the map, they sought the assistance of the tithe commissioners, who had in their service scientific and experienced surveyors, competent to pronounce a judgment, after due examination of the work, and whose report was formerly required to determine the adoption of the map, or its duplicate, when submitted to them by the tithe-owner and landowners.

The requisites of the tithe commissioners were also expressed in the contract recommended by the Poor Law

Commissioners, which is printed in the Appendix to this work, and may be available for the guidance of the guardians, when a map is now made under their sole direction.

The approval of the board does not conclude the guardians.

When the tithe commissioners approved of the map, the Poor Law Board gave their approval, and the guardians became liable to pay for it. But as there might be errors in the map, only to be discovered by local inspection and knowledge, the approval of the board by no means concluded the guardians; and if such errors were discovered before the map was paid for they might still have rejected it, unless they had, by unreasonable delay, rendered themselves responsible for it.

The Poor Law Commissioners issued elaborate minutes as to the course to be adopted in reference to the testing of the maps made under their order. But as the Local Government Board do not undertake the service of approving maps which are made under a different statute, namely, the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 10, though with the sanction of their order, these regulations are here omitted.

Survey always required.

It may be well to observe that the statute provides for a survey and valuation, with or without a map. The Poor Law Board, when a map was not required, nevertheless ordered a survey and valuation to be made. This was strictly according to the language of the statute, and only imported that there was to be such a survey as would be requisite to enable the surveyor to value the property, but not such as would be necessary for the making of a map.

In regard to the valuation, all that the board did was to examine the form in which it had been drawn up, and if that were conformable to the terms of the contract which is in furtherance of the exigencies of the statute, they were accustomed to express their approval of the valuation, stating at the same time that they did not testify to its accuracy in any other respect than as regarded its form, and that the correctness of the valuation could only be ascertained by local knowledge.

The Poor Law Board's approval of the valuation.

At the same time, if the document in itself showed that the principles of the law in regard to the valuation of property for the poor rate had in any respect been neglected or violated by the valuer, or if it showed any defect or omission or any erroneous entry, they declined to approve, and required the valuation to be corrected, or the questionable matter explained.

A subject of difficulty arose in the valuation of property in many parishes in regard to the minuteness of the details. A perfect valuation would set forth the value of every specific portion of land, and every building, so that the value of every field, acre, and building might be shown. But to obtain such a valuation, more expense would generally be incurred than the occasion would warrant. Hence, the commissioners recommended that the valuation should be made of every hereditament which was separately rateable at the time of the valuation, and such rateability was generally assumed from the fact of the holding being at the time separately rated. But it is obvious that property which happened not to be rated because it might be untenanted or unoccupied was not properly omitted. Neither could property occupied by paupers or poor persons whose rates are frequently excused by the justices be properly left out.

After a time the holding might become divided and the property might form the subject of separate assessments. The contract recommended by the commissioners provided for this contingency, as it was therein stipulated by the valuer that he would in such cases supply the valuation for the separate parts at a moderate remuneration. If this could not be readily procured, or if the overseers did not feel it necessary to incur the expense, they might require the several occupiers of that which had been held by one person to adjust between themselves the respective proportion of the value which had been assigned to the whole; and if such adjustment could not be effected, they might exercise their own judgment as to the value of the separate holdings.

In the Union Assessment Committee Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 28, where by reason of any alteration in the occupation of any property included in the valuation list, such property has become liable to be rated in parts not mentioned in such list as rateable hereditaments, and separately rated therein, such parts may, where no supplemental list has been approved, be rated at fair apportioned parts of the annual rateable value.

It should be noticed that in determining the separate rateability of property it was not expedient to consider whether it was all held under one landlord or not. The nature of the property, and the usual course of dealing with it, in regard to the assessment by the overseers, was to be considered with reference to this matter. One landlord may let two houses to another person, but it would generally be found that the houses are separately assessed to the poor rate; on the other hand, a dwelling-house and garden would be the subject of one assessment, though the house were rented of one person and the garden of another.

It may be well to notice that where a valuation is made under the recent Acts, the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, requires the valuer to make his valuation in writing, and to show the particulars of the several hereditaments comprised therein, and the amounts at which he has valued the same respectively, and to sign the same.

Requisites
of the 27
& 28 Vict.
c. 39, s. 4
tions.

The guardians were bound to procure for the parish a valuation. They were to contract with the surveyor for such a valuation, and the surveyor could not claim a remuneration from them for anything but a correct valuation. It was, however, for the guardians to determine whether the valuation which was supplied was or was not a correct valuation. They might, and usually did, consult the parish officers and the vestry, but were not bound to reject it, although the parish officers and the vestry reported against the correctness. It not unfrequently happened that the very accuracy of the valuation dissatisfied influential members of the parish; and because some property was valued at a higher amount than during past years, it was alleged that the valuation was incorrect.

The guardians, therefore, were required cautiously to examine the grounds of complaint, and scrutinize the objections; but when assured that the objections were well founded were required to reject the valuation, if the surveyor was unable to remove them. The guardians were advised, however, that they had contracted with the surveyor, and were liable to him for the payment unless they could prove that the valuation was substantially incorrect.

Promptness of
requisite.

One point was necessary to be attended to by the guardians: they were required to be prompt in their decision; they were entitled to make all reasonable inquiries as to the accuracy of the document, but they were not justified in retaining it for a longer time than such inquiries would fairly occupy. Wherever the approval of the Poor Law Board was requisite it was usually stipulated by the surveyor that the guardians should forward the valuation or map to the board within a specified time, and they were liable for a breach of this covenant to the surveyor in damages; but in the contracts now entered into this stipulation is omitted, as that board have not undertaken the examination of the valuations or maps now made.

tion or map not to be used until finally

The guardians were advised not only to be prompt in deciding, but on no account to allow the valuation or map to be used by themselves, or by the parish officers, unless it were finally accepted. By such use the guardians concluded themselves, so that they would be held in law to have accepted it, and if indeed the contract price could not be recovered from them, they would nevertheless be bound to pay such a sum as it might be found by a jury to be reasonably worth. If it were substantially and extensively incorrect, such a sum, it was considered, would probably have been small, but the adjustment could only be effected after litigation.

At the same time the guardians could not be made responsible in respect of a use of these documents by the oversers, of which the former were not cognizant, and to which they were not consenting parties. This remark became necessary, because the surveyor often supplied his valuation to the overseers to be used by them in the making of rates, before he had presented it to the guardians, or without any communication with them.

The guardians not responsible for the use unsanctioned by them.

The contract usually stipulated that the map or valuation should be completed by a given time. The period was frequently too short; all parties were at the outset impatient to have the matter concluded, and accordingly an insufficient period was agreed upon. When the time appointed arrived, if the map or valuation were not completed, the contract was at an end, and it appeared to be one in which time was essential, so that the guardians might at once have determined the contract. This, however, was seldom done; more time was granted, and considerable delay often occurred. Though extreme strictness might not have been advisable in this case, it is to be feared that the guardians were generally too lax, and afforded too readily an extension of time, to the prejudice of the parties interested in the new survey and valuation.

for the non-completion within the

When it appeared highly probable that the surveyor could not complete his contract, and the time had been extended to no purpose, the guardians were advised to fix some definite time ; and if the work were not then ready, to declare the contract entirely determined. In such a case they were required to proceed to make a new contract ; and if they could not obtain such low terms as in the first instance, or if they suffered any loss in consequence of the non-completion of the contract, they had a right in law to recover from the surveyor the amount of the loss which they sustained. It did not appear that any loss sustained by the parish or parish officers could be recoverable in damages, as the parish officers were not parties to the contract. But in some contracts the guardians specified a sum to be paid as liquidated damages by the surveyor who might fail to complete his contract according to its terms.

veyor.

The death of the surveyor before the completion of the survey and valuation, determined the contract, as this is one requiring personal skill and knowledge on the part of the surveyor, and therefore is not executable by his personal representatives ; although the guardians by the terms of their contract could hold these representatives responsible for the actual default of the surveyor in his lifetime.

The guardians and the parish officers were cautioned not to interfere with, or in any manner to recognize the sub-contractors, with whom the surveyor contracted, for the performance of any of the parts of the subject-matter of the contract. The guardians were advised to look to the surveyor, and hold him responsible for the due fulfilment of that contract, and it was shown that their right might be defeated by any interference with the sub-contractor.

The guardians were also reminded, that they contracted for a map or plan, and consequently were entitled to the original document made and completed by the surveyor. They were not to be satisfied with a copy, whether drawn or engraved, or with what was not uncommonly offered as a substitute,—a lithographed print.

receivable.

Again, in reference to the valuation, it was pointed out that the valuer was not to make a rate; he was not required to do more than to ascertain the annual value of the rateable property in the parish. He could not determine any question of exemption from rate, nor any particular proportion in which the property might be rateable. His document was to be for permanent use, and not to be used as a rate by the overseers, and thus destroyed almost as soon as it was made.

not to be made by
but valuation.

It is not necessary to consider how the cost of this valuation and map was provided in accordance with this clause, as it is not likely to be acted upon hereafter. The remarks in former editions upon this head are therefore now omitted. The 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 8, enables a loan to be obtained for paying the cost of a valuation made for a parish under the Assessment Acts, and though sect. 10 provides for the making of a map, it does not authorize a loan for its payment.

It is necessary, however, to observe that the statute now commented upon contains an ambiguity with reference to the mode of providing for these expenses, because it authorized the adoption of two modes, but has not explained who is to have the option. The choice is to be made as they shall see fit, but it is uncertain to whom the word "they" applies, whether to the guardians, or to the Poor Law Commissioners.

In the earliest orders of the commissioners upon this section, they were accustomed to take upon themselves to determine this point, and prescribed the course to be pursued; and where they did so, the guardians could only adopt that course. If, therefore, they ordered a charge to be made upon the rates, the guardians could not make an order upon the churchwardens and overseers to provide for the payment by a separate rate: Reg. v. Bangor, 10 Q. B. 91; 16 L. J. R. M. C. 59.

After this decision, the Poor Law Commissioners altered the terms of the order which they issued, and left the option to the guardians of requiring a separate rate to be made, or a charge on the rates in the terms of the statute.

This has become immaterial, since the provisions in the recent Assessment Acts supply a different course.

Although the statute required that provision should be made for the repayment of the loan within five years, there was no limitation of time within which the creditor must enforce the repayment. He was not precluded from recovering his loan though the five years might have elapsed, and although his security made it repayable by five annual instalments. His remedy was a writ of mandamus to be granted by the Court of Queen's Bench. That court would not, however, have interposed to assist a creditor who had been guilty of laches in regard to enforcing his security. In a late case where no payment had been made for thirteen years after the expiration of the fifth year, but the creditor had repeatedly claimed his debt and applied for it to successive overseers, the court granted the writ: Reg. v. Hurstbourne Tarrant, 31 L. T. 115; 22 Jur. 783; 27 L. J. R. M. C. 214; 22 J. P. 817; 1 E. B. & E. 246.

But now reference must be made to the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 49, s. 3, which provides that where any sum shall have been or shall be borrowed by any guardians, and the debt shall have been or shall be charged by the said guardians on the poor rates, under the authority of any statute, and the same shall be made payable on a day certain, the time of limitation prescribed by that Act for payment of debts shall commence on that day; and in the case of any debt repayable by instalments, each instalment shall be payable within one year next after the day when the same shall fall due, unless the Poor Law Board shall allow an extension of the time for the payment, not exceeding six months, and the interest payable shall be payable within the like times only as the principal.

Cost of valuation allowed to be paid out of the parish property by the commissioners.

The cost of the map and valuation was a subject to which the Poor Law Board considered themselves justified in applying the produce of the sale of parish property under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, s. 3, but as that appropriation can only be made upon the supposition that this was a matter of permanent benefit to the parish whose property has been sold, the board refused to sanction the application of such produce to this purpose, until they had been satisfied that the valuation and map were correct and trustworthy, and therefore calculated to be of lasting benefit to the parish. Consequently, they seldom allowed the produce of such sale to be applied to this purpose, unless the guardians had entered into such a formal contract as would secure the acquisition of a correct map or valuation; nor until the same had been made and been acquiesced in by the parish.

No rule has been laid down in respect of a valuation or map obtained since the recent Assessment Acts.

The guardians cannot contract for copies for themselves.

When a map was to be provided, it was stated that the guardians could not contract to be supplied with one or more copies for themselves; and if any such be provided, could not claim to retain them. They might stipulate with the surveyor to secure to themselves the copyright in the map; in which case, however, they were trustees for the parish, and were bound to make the most of it for the benefit of the parish. As, however, the securing of the copyright enhanced the price, there did not appear to be any advantage to the parish in the guardians securing that right, except when a commutation of the tithes or some similar object in the parish was contemplated; in which case the possession of the copyright might enable the parish to reimburse itself some portion of the cost of the survey.

On the other hand, it might be sometimes expedient for the valuer to avail himself of an accurate map already existing in the parish, without having a new one made. The use of this might be conceded to him gratuitously, and no question would then arise, as sect. 4 expressly authorizes him to use such a survey. But a payment might be required for the use; and it does not appear that, though a copy of such a map might be purchased by the guardians under this section of the Act, they could pay for the mere use of the map.

The Tithe Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, passed in 1842, however, contains the following provision in reference to what are called first class maps.

In sect. 13, it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for any board of guardians of any parish or union, with the consent of the Poor Law Commissioners, and subject to such conditions as the said Poor Law Commissioners may prescribe, to pay out of the rates of any parish any portion of the cost of making or providing any map or plan which shall have been confirmed under the hands and seal of the Tithe Commissioners, or any other sum of money by way of consideration for the use of the said map or plan, for the purpose of estimating the net annual value of property in respect of which rates may be assessed for the relief of the poor: and after the Tithe Commissioners shall have certified in writing that such money has been paid, the overseers of the parish, or any person authorized by them in writing, or any officer of the said board of guardians, or any person authorized by them in writing, shall, at all reasonable times, have access to the copy of the said map or plan deposited with the incumbent and church or chapel wardens of the parish, or other persons approved by the said Tithe Commissioners, and may inspect and make copies or extracts from the said copy without paying anything for such access or inspection, or for making such copies or extracts."

The statute appears to provide for the case where the map has been already made and confirmed by the Tithe Commissioners, and is therefore not aptly framed to meet the cases where the map and valuation were proceeding contemporaneously.

The Poor Law Commissioners only took care to satisfy themselves that the map had been duly certified and approved of by the Tithe Commissioners, and did not find it necessary to impose any particular conditions in the application of this provision, which has been found to be of little practical avail.

As the valuation and the map, where any such was made under this statute, were in fact made for the parish, and paid for out of the poor rates of the parish, they became the property of the parish, and were to be deposited in such custody as the inhabitants in vestry assembled might think fit to direct, according to 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 6; so, however, that the parish officers might have access to them for the purpose of making the rates. Until, however, such direction was given, the guardians were entitled to the custody, subject to the right of the overseers to the inspection and use of them for such purpose, because no other person could, in the absence of all direction by the vestry, show a better claim.

Custody
of the

Disputes sometimes arose between boards of guardians and parishes upon the subject of the custody of these documents, but the legal principles appear clearly to be as thus stated.

As regards the valuation lists made under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, express provisions are made for their custody, which will be found in that Act.

No means existed by which in general a valuation of some part only of a parish could be procured by competent authority, unless the same were rendered necessary by an appeal against the rate. This was remedied by the Act 10 & 11 Vict. c. 110, s. 7, which enacted, "that the guardians of any union may, on the application of the major part of the overseers of any parish comprised in it, or of any person assessed to the poor rate in any such parish, cause a valuation to be made at any time of any property alleged to be rateable to the relief of the poor, being a part only of the rateable property of such parish, and may charge the expenses of such valuation to the overseers of such parish, or to such person so applying as aforesaid."

By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 28, these provisions are extended to the guardians of a parish not comprised in any union.

In carrying this provision into execution the guardians should take care to have a proper contract made for the valuation of that part of the property of the parish which is to be valued. They are evidently to act in this case as in the general case to which the Parochial Assessment Act applies, with one exception. They were not required to have the order of the Poor Law Board. Hence, they should not simply consent to the employment of a surveyor by the overseers, but should carefully select the valuer, and make a formal appointment of him for this special service.

When the application is made by the overseers, little or no difficulty will occur as to the payment. If a ratepayer apply, the guardians should require him to guarantee them against the cost.

Where the rate is appealed against, it was the opinion of the Poor Law Board that as the overseers must take all reasonable means to defend the rate themselves, they are justified in employing surveyors to value any of the property which is the subject of the appeal, preliminary to the trial, without any other authority.

The Act, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, contains additional provisions, whereby the valuation of particular properties in parishes may be valued for the overseers; and has practically superseded 10 & 11 Vict. c. 110, s. 7, in unions, though it has not been actually repealed.

It is to be observed, that in this and the subsequent sections, the term parish alone is used; and though it is probable that considering the whole of the Act, the courts would interpret it to signify every place for which a separate poor rate is made, the question is in fact determined by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 18, which, as already noticed, incorporates 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, with 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, and enacts that the words "guardian," "justice or justices of the peace," "overseers," "parish," "person," "poor rate," "general quarter sessions," and "union," and the words importing the singular number, or the masculine gender only, in the present statute, shall be interpreted as in the Poor Law Amendment Act. The following passage, therefore, is here introduced from the 109th section of 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76:—

terms used in the statute.

"The word 'guardian' shall be construed to mean and include any visitor, governor, director, manager, acting guardian, vestryman, or other officer in a parish or union, appointed or entitled to act as a manager of the poor, and in the distribution or ordering of the relief to the poor from the poor rate, under any general or local Act of parliament ;

“The words ‘justice or justices of the peace’ shall be construed to include justices of the peace of any county, division of a county, riding, borough, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, county of a town, cinque port, or town corporate, unless where otherwise provided by this Act :

“The word ‘overseer’ shall be construed to mean and include overseers of the poor, churchwardens, so far as they are authorized or required by law to act in the management or relief of the poor, or in the collection or distribution of the poor rate, assistant overseer, or any other subordinate officer, whether paid or unpaid, in any parish or union, who shall be employed therein in carrying this Act, or the laws for the relief of the poor, into execution ;

Since the establishment of union chargeability this definition has become inapplicable in unions, and the statute 29 & 30 Vict. c. 113, s. 18, accordingly has enacted that “in all statutes, except there shall be something in the context inconsistent therewith, the word parish shall, among other meanings applicable to it, signify a place for which a separate poor rate is or can be made, or for which a separate overseer is or can be appointed."

"The words 'general quarter sessions' shall extend to, and be construed to include, general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, for any county, division of a county, riding, borough, liberty, division of a liberty, precinct, county of a city, city, county of a town, cinque port, or town corporate, unless where otherwise provided by this Act ;

"The word 'union' shall be construed to include any number of parishes united for any purpose whatever under the provisions of this Act * * * or under 22 Geo. 2, c. 83 (now repealed by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 116), or incorporated for the relief or maintenance of the poor under any local Act ;

COMMENTARY ON THE FOURTH SECTION.

entry.

It is to be observed, that this clause empowers the surveyor to enter, view, and examine any messuages, lands, and other hereditaments, for the purpose of his survey. Hence, if he enter without notice or special license, he will not be a trespasser. But it is very doubtful whether he can force an entrance where admission is refused and his entrance is resisted. The surveyor cannot be advised to attempt to do so. He must in such a case make his survey and valuation as well as he can, and the occupier will have himself to blame if, under such circumstances, he shall consider the rate on his premises excessive, and be driven to an appeal.

Meaning
proviso.

It is difficult to understand the object and effect of the proviso in this clause. Probably the intention was that if a map or valuation of any estate which the surveyor deemed correct was tendered to him, he should not enter the premises; but no such prohibition is expressed, and as the clause is framed it is merely provided that the surveyor may use such map or valuation—a provision that would have been assumed although the statute had not contained it.

COMMENTARY ON THE FIFTH SECTION.

This clause is confined to the rate, and does not give any right to an inspection of the map or valuation of the parish, as is frequently supposed. It does not repeal the law formerly existing with reference to the inspection of the rate, though its provisions are somewhat different: Tennant v. Cranston, 8 Q. B. 797; 15 L. J. R. (N. S.) M. C. 105; 2 N. S. C. 425. Extent of the 5th section.

The 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 2, required the parish officers to allow an inspection of every poor rate to any inhabitant of the parish on payment of a shilling, and to give a copy of the rate or any part of it on being paid sixpence for every twenty-four names. Sect. 3 imposed a penalty on the parish officer refusing such inspection or copy. Provision of the 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, s. 2, and the decision thereon.

This Act has been construed not to apply to the parish officers themselves, so as to give any one of them a right to a penalty against his colleagues: Wethered v. Callcutt, 11 L. J. R. (N. S.) M. C. 123; 5 Scott, 409; S. C. 2 Lum. P. L. C. 95.

It has been held, that the inhabitant claiming to inspect the rate need not be rated, and that his right is not restricted to the existing rate of the parish: Batchelor v. Hodges, 4 A. & E. 592; S. C. 1 Lum. P. L. C. 145. But in the section now under consideration the power is conferred on the ratepayers only.

The statute 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 13, which required copies of all rates for the relief of the poor to be entered in books to be provided by the churchwardens Custody rate books.

and overseers, enacted that such books should be carefully preserved by them in some place in the parish, whereto all persons assessed, or liable to be assessed, might freely resort.

And 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 6, provides that all rates and assessments should be kept by such person or persons and deposited in such place and manner as the inhabitants in vestry assembled shall direct.

It imposes a penalty upon any person having the custody of any such rate or assessment who shall wilfully or negligently destroy, obliterate, or injure the same, or refuse to deliver it to the person or deposit it in the place appointed by the vestry.

It is understood that this Act applies to rate books and assessments which are closed. Current rate books must be in the possession of the overseers or of the collector, who requires them for his collection: Reg. v. Christchurch, 7 E. & B. 409; 26 L. J. M. C. 68.

Rate
books, when open to inspection

The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 33, requires the overseers to cause their rate books to be made up and balanced seven days before the audit, and to deposit them in some place in the parish, and to notify the same publicly in the parish. It is then provided that such books shall, on each of those days, be open between the hours of eleven and three for the inspection of every person liable to be rated to the relief of the poor.

The auditor, by sect. 32 of that Act, may find certain books to be due from a person accounting to him, and certify accordingly, and enforce the delivery of the same books to the person entitled to receive them.

It will be convenient to mention other statutes which authorize the inspection of the poor rate.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 161, s. 16, the assessed taxes commissioners and their surveyors are authorized to inspect and take copies of or extracts from the poor rate; and persons having custody thereof, and refusing to allow the same to be done, are subject to a penalty of 10*l*. Inspection under the Assessed Tax Act.

Power is given, by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 38, to the surveyor of the highways, and to any person authorized by him in writing, to inspect the poor rate, and to make extracts therefrom, a penalty of 5*l*. being imposed on the person having the custody for refusal. Under the Highway Act.

The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, s. 76, empowers the income tax commissioners, inspectors, surveyors, and assessors to inspect and take copies or extracts from the poor rate without payment of any fee, and subjects overseers who refuse to permit them to do so to a penalty of 20*l*. Under the Income Tax Act.

The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 16, enables registered electors for members of parliament, and claimants, to inspect the poor rate book, and to make extracts therefrom, between the 10th and the 31st August, without the payment of any fee. And by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 13, in every parish situate wholly or partly either in Under the Parliamentary Registration Act.

a parliamentary borough or a municipal borough the whole or part of the area whereof is co-extensive with or included in the area of a parliamentary borough, the books containing the poor rates made for the parish within the previous two years shall at all reasonable times be open free of charge to the inspection of any person who is registered as a parliamentary voter for the parliamentary borough, or enrolled as a burgess for the municipal borough, and such voter or burgess may make any copy thereof or take any extract therefrom.

Inspection
under the Towns Improvement
Clauses
Act.

The Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 43, s. 178, provides that the commissioners therein referred to shall have a like power to inspect the poor rate, and to take copies or extracts therefrom, and imposes a penalty of 5*l.* upon the overseers who will not suffer them to do so.

Under the Public Health
Act.

The Public Health Act, 1875, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55 s. 212, enacts that for the purpose of assessing general district rates any person appointed by the urban authority may inspect, take copies of, or make extracts from any valuation list or rate for the relief of the poor within the district, or any book relating to the same. Any officer having the custody of any such rate or book who refuses to permit such inspection or the taking of such copies or extracts shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*

The Public Health Act, 1875, Sch. 11, Part I., Rule 38, also requires the clerk of the board of guardians of any union, and the overseers or other officers of every parish wholly or in part within the parts for which the election is held, and having the custody of any books or papers relating to the election of guardians of the poor, or of the poor rate books relating to any such parish, to permit the same to be inspected, and copies or extracts to be taken therefrom by the returning officer; and any person having the custody of any such books or papers who refuses to permit the same to be inspected or copies or extracts to be taken therefrom shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 81, s. 7, enables the county rate committee, when they consider it necessary for the purpose of that Act (the County Rate Act) to call for all parochial assessments, and the valuations from which they are made, and it imposes a penalty not exceeding 20*l*. on any person having their custody who refuses to produce them.

Inspection
under the County
Rate Act.

The 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 13, gives a like authority to the assessment committee of the union which comprises the parish.

Under the Union Assessment
Committee
Act.

The text of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 5, does not in terms give a right of inspection, but as the refusal to allow an inspection would be tantamount to a refusal to allow a copy to be made, it may properly be considered that inferentially the right to the inspection is conferred.

When a vestry clerk is appointed for a parish under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 57, it is enacted in sect. 7 that one of his duties shall be "to keep the vestry books, and the parish documents, and the rate books, and accounts which are closed, and to give copies of, and extracts from, the same to any person entitled thereto (such person paying for the same at the rate of fourpence for every seventy-two words or figures), and to permit any person or persons rated to the relief of the poor of the said parish, at all reasonable times, to inspect the same or any of them, on pain of dismissal for neglecting to give such copies or permit such inspection."

Reference must be made to the provisions in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, ss. 17, 23, in regard to the inspection of the valuation lists made for any parish in the union; and also to the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 72, s. 6, empowering clerks to guardians in South Wales to call for the production of rate books, as well as to 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 11, with reference to the inspection of rates for the purposes of the jury lists; and 20 and 21 Vict. c. 64, s. 13, enabling the receiver of the Metropolitan Police to inspect rates.

COMMENTARY ON THE SIXTH SECTION.

Object of
section.

No provision is contained in the Act as to the officers who are to undertake the giving and affixing of the notices, nor as to the remuneration to be paid to them for so doing. The clerks to the justices of the several divisions generally gave these notices, and in many cases made charges upon the overseers of the several parishes for doing so. But as there was no authority for such a charge, the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 101, s. 7, provided for the charge upon the poor rates thus:—"Whereas by the Act of the seventh year of his late Majesty, King William the Fourth, intituled An Act to regulate Parochial Assessments, it is provided that the justices acting in and for every petty sessions division shall hold special sessions for hearing appeals against the rates of the several parishes within their respective divisions, and shall cause public notice of the time and place of the holding of such special sessions to be given in each parish, but no provision is made for the payment of the costs incurred in preparing and giving of such notice:" Be it therefore enacted, that such fee or remuneration as shall have been or shall hereafter be settled by the justices of the peace at their respective general quarter sessions, according to the statute in that behalf, to be paid to the clerks to justices of the peace for the preparing and giving of a notice of a special sessions for this purpose, or in default thereof of a notice of any special sessions, shall be paid by the overseers of each parish comprised within the division for which the special sessions are to be held, and be charged by them upon the poor rate.

The statute here referred to is the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 30; see Glen's Summary Jurisdiction Acts, 4th Edition, p. 138.

It seems that borough justices can now hold such special sessions.

As the justices acting in every petty sessions division are to hold these special sessions, the Poor Law Commissioners stated their opinion, that as borough justices did not act in any such division, they did not come within this provision, and could not hold such sessions. But the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 18, s. 1, having provided that the sitting and acting of justices or of a stipendiary magistrate in a city or borough having a separate commission of the peace shall be deemed a petty sessions, and the district a petty sessional division, this distinction appears to have been removed.

If the party be dissatisfied with the judgment of the special sessions, the statute enables him to appeal from that judgment to the quarter sessions, and it seems that such latter appeal must be to the next practicable quarter sessions after the special sessions. See observations of PATTERSON, J. in Reg. v. Trafford, ubi infra.

It must not be overlooked that the legislature has not made the appeal to the special sessions primarily an absolute substitution for the appeal to the quarter sessions. The party aggrieved has an option as to which sessions he will resort to.

The right of appeal to the sessions is reserved to the ratepayer by the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103. s. 22, notwithstanding a valuation list may have been settled and approved by the committee for the parish. See Appendix.

The mode of giving

A case occurred, in regard to the recognizance which is required to be entered into by the party impugning the decision of the special sessions, which should be noticed. The appellant entered into a recognizance before three justices of the peace, an entry whereof was made in their minute book by their officer, and signed. The recognizance, according to the usual practice, should have been made up from that book, and have been signed by one of the justices. It was so made up, but was not signed, and was returned to the quarter sessions unsigned. The sessions considered that the recognizance was imperfect, and refused to hear the appeal. But the Court of Queen's Bench held that the recognizance was made, and that the parties to it could not have taken this objection to it; consequently, the court issued a mandamus to the sessions to hear the appeal: Reg. v. St. Albans JJ., 1 P. & D. 148; S. C. 1 Lum. P. L. C. 153.

With reference to the appeal, it is to be observed that notice thereof is to be given, seven days at least before the day appointed for such special session, to the overseer. The same words occur in the 81st section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76; and it has been held, that they signify that the days should be clear, that is, both the day of giving the notice and that of its expiration must be included in the computation. See Reg. v. Shropshire JJ., 8 A. & E. 179; S. C. 1 Lum. P. L. C. 296; and Reg. v. Middlesex JJ., 2 N. S. C. 73. It would seem that a signature of the notice by the appellant's attorney would be sufficient: Reg. v. Cumberland JJ., 5 Dowl. & L. 431 (n.)

The notice of appeal to these special sessions is only to be given to the collector, overseer, or other person by whom the rate was made. Consequently, if any objection be made to the assessment upon other persons as unfair with reference to the appellant, it would not be requisite under this section that notice should be given to such persons, as is required by the 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 6, which applies to the quarter sessions. It has been held that service of notice of appeal upon one of the overseers is sufficient: Reg. v. Devon JJ., 3 N. S. C. 96. And now, by the statute 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, notice must be given to the assessment committee of the union, twenty-one days before the appeal can be heard. Moreover, it is provided in the same section that no person shall appeal against the rate unless he shall have previously given notice of objection against the valuation list to such committee, and shall have failed to obtain such relief as he deems just. See Appendix. And this notice is required in reference to every rate appealed against: Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, L. R. 4 Q. B. 323; 10 B. & S. 318.

An important question arose, as to the special sessions to which the party must make the appeal; this did not appear from the statute, but the Court of Queen's Bench has decided that the party should appeal to the next practicable special sessions after the rate has been made: Reg. v. Lancashire JJ., 14 Jur. 552; 4 N. S. C. 130; Reg. v. Trafford, 15 Q. B. 200; Reg. v. Hammond, 4 N. S. C. 316. Where three special sessions and three quarter sessions had intervened, but no fresh rate had been made, the court considered that an appeal to the fourth special sessions was too late: Reg. v. Trafford, supra. The justices, in acting under this section, must make their order, in writing, otherwise their judgment cannot be questioned in the Court of Queen's Bench. See Reg. v. Wigan JJ., 6 Jur. 930:

But since 27 & 28, Vict. c. 39, s. 1, an appeal against the poor rate, soon after the decision of the assessment committee, was held to be in time, though long after the making of the rate: Reg. v. Biggleswade Union, 21 L. T. (N. S.) 494; 33 J. P. 791.

COMMENTARY ON THE SEVENTH SECTION.

It will be right to consider what powers of amending or quashing any rate, or of awarding costs and recovering the same, have been given by previous statutes where the appeal was to the quarter sessions. The 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 5, provided, that if parties felt aggrieved with any assessment, the justices at their sessions should do as should to them be thought convenient; and hence it appears the justices at the quarter sessions were considered to be empowered to quash the rate for any defect in it. Such power is fully admitted to exist by 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 6, by which statute the justices were prohibited from altering the assessment with reference to other persons than the appellants. But 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, ss. 1 and 6, enabled the justices at their sessions in all cases to amend or alter the rate, either by inserting therein or striking out the name of any person, or altering the sum therein charged on any person, or in any other manner which the said court shall think necessary for giving such relief; but it is provided, that if the court shall be of opinion that it is necessary for the purpose of giving relief to the applicant that the rate should be wholly quashed, then the court may quash the same.

By sect. 3, when the court has ordered a rate to be quashed, they may order any sum in the rate charged on any person not to be paid, and thereupon all proceedings to recover the same shall be discontinued or prevented; but sect. 7 provides that the rate, when altered, shall be recovered according to the alterations made. Sect. 8 requires the justices to order in every case where the name is struck out, or the amount of the assessment is reduced, that any amount which has been paid over and above what ought to have been paid shall be refunded by the churchwardens and overseers.

When the rate is quashed by the justices under this Act, the overseers are required, by 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 1, to give credit in the next effective rate for sums paid under the quashed rate, and this provision applies to persons who did not appeal against it previous to its being quashed as well as to the appellants: Reg. v. Kingston-upon-Thames JJ., 22 J. P. 36; 22 Jur. 760. But a person not assessed in the quashed rate cannot claim a deduction in the subsequent rate, though made to make good the deficiency caused by the deductions allowed to the previous ratepayers: Ib.

Costs.

The 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, enables the justices to award reasonable costs to the party for whom the appeal shall be determined, in the same manner as in cases of appeals against orders of removal by 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 30, the 3rd section whereof provides for the order being made by the sessions; and enacts that if the party liable thereto lives out of the jurisdiction of the sessions, a justice of the peace of the place where the party inhabits shall enforce the payment of the order for the costs by issuing a distress warrant, or in default of sufficient distress, by committing the party liable to prison for twenty days.

The statute 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, enables the court of quarter sessions to order payment of costs, and provides that they shall be recoverable in the manner provided by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. It seems from the cases of Reg. v. Huntley, 3 E. & B. 172, and Gay v. Matthews, 7 L. T. 504, that the order for costs may direct the payment to be made to the party entitled, or to the clerk of the peace for such party.

Where the party lives within the jurisdiction of the sessions, the disobedience of their order would also be punishable by indictment.

The entering of the appeal and the quashing of the rate by the sessions, after the respondents had given notice that they would not oppose the appeal, were held to be a determination of the appeal: Rex v. Cowston, 4 D. & R. 445. But unless a determination do take place, no costs can be granted: Rex v. Essex JJ., 8 T. R. 583. If the appellant do not appear, and the court dismiss the appeal with costs, those costs may be the full costs incurred by the respondents, though no express notice be given to the appellants of an intention to claim them : Reg. v. The London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, 12 Jur. 897 ; 17 L. J. R. M. C. 119.

Evidence
rate.

It may be here noticed, as a matter of evidence, that the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 18, enacts that the production of the book purporting to contain a poor rate, with the allowance of the rate by the justices, shall, if the rate be made in the form prescribed by law, be prima facie evidence of the due making and publication of such rate, but the section does not apply to a highway rate, as the Act is not incorporated with the Highway Acts : Bird v. Adcock, 42 J. P. 308.

the court for refunding of the rate.

The 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 8, provides that where money is ordered to be refunded, the court shall order the money to be refunded, with all reasonable costs, charges, and expenses occasioned by such person having paid the same ; and that such sum, together with all such costs, shall be levied and recovered by distress, and by all such other means as the poor rate can be levied or recovered.

Upon this section, it has been held, that the court which hears the appeal is alone capable of making this order, and that no subsequent court of sessions can do so : Rex v. Justices of St. Peter's Liberty, York, 4 B. & Ad. 342 ; 1 N. & M. 108.

Refunding of rate paid prior to the appeal.

If the rate be paid previous to notice of appeal, the overseers cannot be compelled by action to refund the amount, though the rate be afterwards reduced : Priestley v. Watson, 2 Cr. & Mee. 691. But if the party assessed pending the appeal pay the full rate on an assessment afterwards reduced by the sessions, the overseers may give credit for the excess in subsequent rates without an order of sessions, and the Court of Queen's Bench will not compel the issue of a distress warrant to compel the payment of those rates in full : Reg. v. Parker, 7 E. & B. 155 ; 26 L. J. M. C. 313.

The provision in the 6th section of the statute in the text (which perhaps must be considered as applicable to the justices in the special sessions only, though that construction is open to some question), gives a complete discretion to those justices in regard to the awarding of costs.

COMMENTARY ON THE SCHEDULE.

On reference to sect. 2, it will be seen that the form of the schedule is not necessarily to be the form of the rate. But it is provided that there shall be an account of every particular set forth at the head of the respective columns in the form given in the schedule, in addition to any other particulars which the form of making out such rate shall require to be set forth. As before noticed, there was no form given by any statute, neither was any form specifically required by law ; but the Poor Law Commissioners considered that, under the power given by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 15, of issuing orders to regulate the keeping of the accounts which relate to the management or relief of the poor, they were justified in prescribing a particular form of rate.

They have in their first orders of accounts set forth a specific form in which the rate was to be made, which form was issued before the passing of the Parochial Assessment Act. The form so given contained all the particulars set forth in this statute. But they also prescribed, in the order which they issued in conformity with the provisions in the 1st section, a form in which the rate should be drawn up; that form was also set forth in the general order relating to the duties of overseers, which they issued April 22, 1842.

In the general order of accounts, issued March 17, 1847, they prescribed another form of rate book, which was afterwards modified by a general order, dated November 18, 1850, issued after the passing of the Small Tenements Rating Act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99. This was afterwards altered by another general order, dated November 16, 1854. The Poor Law Board, by a General Order dated 14th January, 1867, rescinding all previous orders, prescribed a form of rate book, as follows :—

_____ Overseer, _____ Churchwarden.

(a) This should be the day when the rate is allowed by the Justices.
 (b) Since the passing of the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 14, it has become necessary to add some such words as these "which is estimated to meet all the expenses for the above purposes which will be incurred before the day of _____ next," and when it is proposed to collect it by instalments, to state for what number of instalments the same shall be collected, thus, "and which rate we declare to be payable by _____ instalments, to be paid respectively on the following days, that is to say, on the _____ day of _____ instant, and the _____ day of _____ next."
 (c) In parishes not in union the first alternative is to be used; for parishes in unions the second.
 (d) This is to be obtained by adding columns 11 and 12 together.

Columns
book to be added up.

(a) The several columns of the rate book, which contain the gross estimated rental and rateable value, and the rate in the pound assessed upon the several persons liable to be assessed, the recoverable arrears and the total amount to be collected, shall be added up at the foot of every page, and the several totals shall be ascertained and set forth at the foot of the rate, before the same shall be submitted to the justices for their allowance.

Rate may be divided
tricts.

(b.) If the overseers shall deem it convenient, the rate may be divided into several portions corresponding with the several divisions of their parish, if any, so as to bring all the rateable property of each division together, and there may be separate series of numbers for the assessments in every division, and they may in like manner bring together in the rate separate classes of rateable property.

properties
owner may

(c.) The overseers may, if they think proper, bring together and assess under one number all or any portion of the properties situated in the parish, or in any separate division thereof, if there be any, belonging to the same person, and for which he shall be liable to be assessed as owner.

But it was provided that nothing therein contained shall apply to any poor rate made under the authority of a local Act by persons other than the overseers.

It is well here to notice that the title of the rate ^{The title of the rate.} should be carefully attended to. In Reg. v. Byron, 12 A. & E. (N.S.) 326, COLERIDGE, J., speaking of a church rate, says :—"The title is important for two purposes—to show the objects of the rate, and the authority of those who make it." And afterwards :—"The title must be defective, if it describes a rate which would justify expending money illegally."

The total want of the title renders the rate absolutely void ; but a rate which describes the property in respect of which it is laid as "land, &c.," and omits the "name and situation of the property," and its "estimated extent," is not therefore void ; Moulton v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, 5 E. & B. 974 ; 25 L. J. R. M. C. 49 ; 20 J. P. 566.

In the statute 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 14, it is enacted ^{Period for which the rate is to be made to be set out.} that the overseers of every parish, when they make a poor rate, shall set forth in the title of the rate the period for which the same is estimated, and if the same is payable by instalments, the amount of each instalment, and the date at which each instalment is payable. See Appendix.

The 15th section enables the overseers who make a ^{Rate payable by instalments.} poor rate for a period exceeding three months to declare that it shall be paid by instalments at such times as they shall specify, and thereupon each instalment only shall be enforceable as and when it falls due.

In the schedule of the statute in the text, the second ^{Arrears due, or if excused.} column is headed "Arrears due, or if excused." These Arrears of rate. are distinct matters, and would seem to have required separate columns, but it is a question of much uncertainty to what they refer, whether the arrears of a former rate, or the arrears due on the closing of the present rate. It is also doubtful to what rate the excusal can refer.

It will be observed that the Poor Law Commissioners seemed to understand the meaning of the legislature to be, that the arrears of the past rate are to be inserted in the column, and the word excused to apply to those arrears. But in the example to the schedule to the Act the amount which is entered as excused, is the amount which is inserted in the current rate. At the same time, the overseers are to make the declaration as to the particulars in the respective columns; and how can they do so, if the excusal refers to the rate which is then being made?

In Reg. v. Fordham, 9 L. J. R. (N.S.) M. C. 3, WILLIAMS, J., appears to admit that this column was for the arrears of the former rate; but the point was not argued. The commissioners made a distinction in their order of 1847, to obviate this technical difficulty, by directing that rate books should be provided, in which the rate itself shall be entered, and in which rate book there shall be a copy of the rate, with the additional columns showing the total amount to be collected and the amount actually collected, the arrear at the making of the new rate, and the amounts excused or irrecoverable.

The intention of the legislature seems to have been, that when the rate was made, there should have been left a blank column in which the overseers should have entered the rates which were excused, and those which were in arrear, when they delivered the rate to their successors, or made a new rate. Certainly, however, this intention has not been clearly expressed; and it is probable that much confusion exists with reference to this point in many parishes.

A question of difficulty which had arisen in many cases, namely when the poor rate is made, has been settled by the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 17, which declares that a poor rate shall be deemed to be made on the day it is allowed by the justices, and if the justices sever in their allowance, then on the day of the last allowance. See Appendix.

The same statute, in sect. 19, requires the overseers in every case, whether the rate is collected from the owner or occupier, or the owner is liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier, to enter in the occupier's column the name of the occupier of every rateable hereditament.

A previous section (No. 6) requires owners in certain cases to deliver to the overseers a list of the names of the actual occupiers of the houses for which they compound, or for which they are liable to be rated.

Description of occupier.

There is no rule or enactment to guide the overseers as to how to describe the occupier in the column appropriated to that name. They must describe him according to the best information which they can obtain. Various descriptive terms have been admitted to be sufficient, such as A. & Co., Mills Brothers, B.'s Exors., where the persons intended are known to the overseers, and can be identified. But the actual occupiers should, if possible, be fully named.

Corporations, joint stock companies.

It is right, perhaps to refer to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 106 s. 10, which in the case of corporations aggregate, joint stock or other companies, commissioners, or public trustees enables any officer from time to time appointed by the governing body, whose name shall be sent in writing to the overseers before the 1st day of March in any year, to be entered in the rate book under the name of such corporation, company, commissioners, or public trustees. Such officer shall be entitled to vote in respect of the property as if it were his own; but he is not made liable for the rate. See Appendix.

Succession of occupation.

Provision is made by the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, s. 38, for the rating of persons who come into occupation of premises after the making of the rate, in cases when the house or building was incomplete or unfit for occupation, or was not entered as such in the valuation list in force when the rate was made. See Appendix.

And the 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 16, makes provision for persons who come into the occupation of premises pending the currency of a rate, which the person in occupation at the time when the rate was made has quitted. See Appendix.

In both cases the incoming occupier is to be placed on the rate and compelled to pay a proportionate part of the rate.

Where, however, an outgoing occupier quits premises before the expiration of the period for which the poor rate was made and is not followed by an incoming tenant, but the premises remain unoccupied during the remainder of the period, the outgoing occupier is liable for the whole of the rate, and section 16 of the Act does not apply: St. Werburg v. Hutchinson, 43 J. P. 785; L. R. 5 Exch. D. 19; 49 L. J. M. C. 23; 42 L. T. (N.S.) 153; affirmed by the court of appeal in Hare v. Putney Overseers, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 223; 45 L. T. (N.S.) 337.

It must be observed, that the declaration at the foot of the rate is to be altered in every parish where the rate is not made under the provisions of a local Act when the valuation list for the parish shall have been settled and approved of by the union assessment committee. The declaration must then be as follows:—

“We, the undersigned, do hereby declare that one of us, or some person on our behalf, has examined and compared the several particulars in the respective columns of the above rate with the valuation list made under the authority of the Union Assessment Committee Act of 1862, in force in this parish or township, and the several hereditaments are, to the best of our

tion at the foot.

belief, rated according to the value appearing in such valuation list.

_____, Churchwarden.
 _____, Churchwarden.
 _____, Overseer.
 _____, Overseer."

It will be remembered that the Poor Law Board also require the total amount of the rate to be set out in words.

As their form contemplates that the rate on the property rated in the name of the owner should appear in a column by itself, and not in the column for the occupier's rate, the totals of the two columns must be added together, and the amount of the aggregate of both set out at the foot of the rate.

As already noticed in page 147, any defect in these formal parts of the rate does not render it void. Therefore, in the case of Moulton v. Eastern Counties Railway Company, ubi supra, it was held that an omission in the sixth column, which should show the description of the property rated, was held not to invalidate the rate, though one of the judges hesitated in coming to this conclusion.

But if the rate be not made according to the annual rateable value appearing in the valuation list in force in the parish, it will, according to the provisions of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 28, be of no force.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE TO THE CONTRACT, CONTAINING

THE REGULATIONS WHICH APPLY TO THE MAP.

The following instructions, which are in accordance with those formerly required by the tithe commissioners to be strictly followed in the preparation of plans for the Tithe Commutation Act (a), are to be observed by the surveyor and named in the above-written contract :—

DESCRIPTION OF PLAN REQUIRED.

Objects to be represented on the plan.

The plan is required to represent in their true relative positions the several objects which now occupy the surface of the ground ; such as railways, roads, rivers, lakes, ponds, canals, streams, drains, parks, woods,

(a) Since this contract was first framed, the tithe commissioners issued other instructions, which embrace the regulations set out in this schedule, and also contain those which follow :—

(They are printed here by way of instruction to the guardians and the surveyor, as to what should be done in preparing and executing the plan.)

DESCRIPTION OF PLAN REQUIRED.

The plan is to be made on good drawing-paper, previously mounted on linen.

“ When the quantity of two or more contiguous parcels of land is given in one sum, the reference number must be repeated on each parcel, or the parcels must be connected by a brace, as in the annexed sketch : where it is shown by the brace (α) that four parcels of fences, houses, and other buildings, bridges, &c., also the boundaries of counties and their various sub-divisions, such as ridings, lathes, wapentakes, rapes, hundreds, parishes, townships, &c.; and all other detail that is usually given in estate surveys.

The boundaries or limits of all lands and parcels of lands which are to be assessed separately under the provisions of the Parochial Assessment Act are required to be marked on the plan, whether they be defined by fences or not; and where no boundary fences appear, the limits are to be shown by a dotted line.

land, the house and the pond, are all included in the quantity assigned to No. 47.

"Where the whole breadth, or any portion of a road, stream, &c., is included with the adjoining field, the brace must also be used: and where only part of the road, stream, &c., is included, the exact limit to which the quantity applies must be marked with a dotted line on the plan. See No. 48, in the annexed sketch; of which the quantity is thus shown to include the whole breadth of the lane, half the road, and half the stream.

"When a parish is mapped in two or more distinct parts, a notice to that effect must be added to the title.

"The lines of construction, or main lines, should, wherever practicable, be laid out before they are chained, and be disposed in the forms of triangles, each triangle having a proper proof-line measured within it from one of the angles to the opposite side.

* * * * *

"The chained lines are all to be drawn upon the plan in red ink, and marked with a reference to the number of the lines in the field-books, or to the page of the book in which the notes of the measurement are entered; thus L. 1, L. 2, L. 3, &c., if referring to the lines, or P. 1, P. 2, P. 3, &c., when referring to the pages. And when several field-books are used, each book should have a distinctive letter assigned to it, which may be added to the reference upon the plan after the number referring to the line or page, thus L. 1, A; P. 1, B, &c. The lengths of the construction or main lines should also be added to their respective reference numbers.

"The entries in the field-books are to be made with ink, in the field, and the chained lines are to be numbered consecutively throughout the books.

Numbers on the plan.
Book of

Each separate parcel of land is to be numbered upon the plan, the numbers following in succession, from No. 1 to the highest number required. These numbers will refer to the book of reference, in which are to be specified the name and description of each field or enclosure, with its true quantity or contents in statute measure; the names and description of the occupiers thereof; the state of cultivation of the several lands, whether as arable, meadow, pasture, wood, coppice, or common land, gardens, orchards, hop-grounds; or howsoever otherwise.

Railways, roads, rivers, lakes, ponds, and canals are to be numbered upon the plans in the same manner as inclosures, and their contents given separately in the book of reference.

Alterations in the field-
books.

“When alterations are made in the field-books, an explanation of the cause of the alteration is to be entered at the same time; and erasures in the field-books can on no account be allowed.

“The quantities are not to be written upon the plan, but in the reference book only.

“The quantities in the reference book are to be arranged in the consecutive order of their reference numbers; and figures are invariably to be used for the reference.”

* * * * *

It may be remarked that the tithe commissioners would not pledge themselves to seal a plan to which any of the following objections applied, without testing it upon the ground:—

1. Where there was any reason to distrust the authenticity or integrity of the survey.
2. Where the means afforded were insufficient to prove the accuracy of the work in all its details.
3. Where the plan did not agree with the field-books.
4. Where the field-books had been kept in common or metallic pencil.
5. Where erasures had been made in the field-books.
6. Where alterations had been made in the field-books without a satisfactory explanation being afforded.
7. Where the offsets exceeded a chain in length.

The plan is to be drawn to the scale of (a), Scales. and the ordinary usage is to be observed of placing the north towards the top of the plan, writing the name of the parish and county as a title, the name and address of the surveyor, the date of performance, the scale, and the total contents.

All lines measured over hilly ground are to be Slopes. reduced to the horizontal plane.

The lines of construction are, in all cases, to be Lines of drawn upon the plan in red ink, to distinguish construction. them from, and prevent their interfering with, the lines of fences, &c.; and the length of each line in links should be marked with red figures upon it. Lines measured in the direction of external objects should be drawn out to the margin of the plan, and have the name of the external object written upon them.

The parish boundary should be shown in all cases Parish by a dotted line; and when it passes along the middle boundary. of a fence, the dots should be drawn on both sides of the fence, thus:—

Fence

When a road forms part of the boundary of a Road. parish, both fences of the road must be shown, and it will be desirable also to mark the abutments of other fences upon the outer fence of the road.

(a) This must be determined in the contract actually entered into and agreed upon between the surveyor and the board of guardians.

Rivers.

The same remark will apply to rivers generally, in Lincolnshire and other fen districts, to droves, and the drains by which they are bounded.

Fields divided by the parish

When a parish boundary passes through a field or other inclosure, without being defined by a fence, the whole of such field or inclosure should be shown on the plan, with the parish boundary (marked by a dotted line), passing through it. The area of the included portion only of such field or inclosure will appear in the book of reference; but the area of the excluded portion should be given on the plan, and be marked as belonging to the adjoining parish.

Fences.

In all cases of fences, the actual boundary line of the adjacent properties is to be marked upon the plan, whether it be the central line or the side of a hedge, ditch, wall, bank, &c.; and when the fence belongs entirely to one property or the other, that should be indicated by the proper mark.

surement.

It is essential that the accuracy of the plan, when completed, should be such that the admeasurement on the plan of the inclosures therein represented should correspond with the quantities assigned to them in the book of reference, and such also as to bear the test of the comparison of any proof lines which it may be deemed proper to have measured upon the ground.

Surveyor and Valuer.

NOTES ON FORM OF VALUATION.

It may be useful to observe, with reference to the columns in the form for the valuation book, that the columns 1, 2, 3 and 4, will necessarily be taken from the book of reference connected with the plan (if there be a plan), and that the churchwardens and overseers in making out a rate will only have to deal with columns 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10, which they can copy into the rate book.

The surveyor is not required to put in the name of the owner, as that must be supplied in the rate book by the overseers, according as claims are put in by owners or proxies under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1831.

The column, headed "Gross estimated rental," must be filled up with the estimated value of the holding, calculated on an estimate of the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and the tithe commutation rent-charge (if any). 25 & 26 Vict. c. 103, s. 15.

The column, headed "Rateable value," must be filled up thus:—From the gross rental, ascertained as above, must be deducted the probable average annual costs of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses (if any), necessary to maintain the property in a state to command such rent. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1.

The Surveyor will be required, since the 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, to show the particulars of the several hereditaments comprised in the valuation, and the amounts at which he had valued the same. He must therefore insert the value of each field or parcel in one holding.

"WHEREAS, the municipal corporations of cities and boroughs named in the Schedules (A.) and (B.) annexed to the Act passed in the sixth year (a) of the reign of King William the Fourth, to provide for the regulation of municipal corporations in England and Wales, have been held (b) not to be liable by law to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of any lands, tenements, and hereditaments, being the properties and in the occupation of such municipal corporations, by reason that the income arising therefrom is applicable to public purposes only; and it is expedient that such municipal corporations should, nevertheless, in some cases be rateable and be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such property: Be it therefore enacted, that the said municipal corporations named in the said schedules shall, from and after the passing of this Act, be rateable and be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, being the property and in the occupation of such municipal corporations, as if such lands, tenements, and hereditaments were not corporate property, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding (c).

(a) 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

(b) This was held in Reg. v. Liverpool, 9 A. & E. 435; S. C. 1 Lum. P. L. C. 102; Reg. v. Exminster, 12 A. & E. 2; S. C. 2 Lum. P. L. C. 75.

2. And be it enacted, that any of the said municipal corporations, being in the occupation of such lands, tenements, and hereditaments, as are hereinbefore described, shall be deemed and taken to be beneficial (d) occupiers thereof, for all the purposes of rating, as if such occupation was for their own private advantage, and not for any public purposes or purpose, and shall be liable to be rated as such occupiers by their corporate style and title.

The said corporations to be deemed beneficial occupiers.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 36.

An Act to exempt from County, Borough, Parochial, and other Local Rates, Land and Buildings occupied by Scientific or Literary Societies (e).

[July 28, 1843.]

“WHEREAS, it is expedient that societies established exclusively for purposes of science, literature, or the fine arts, should be exempt from the charge of county, borough, parochial, and other local rates in respect of lands and buildings occupied by them for the transaction of their business, and for carrying into effect their purposes :” Be it therefore enacted, ^{Scientific societies} unions the proviso to this section, which exempted the property of municipal corporations from being rated to the relief of the poor in the cases therein mentioned, was repealed by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 30.

(d) This was apparently a statutory recognition of the doctrine of the courts of law which introduced the term beneficial into the statute 43 Eliz. c. 2, whereby the poor rate was enacted, which doctrine has since been reversed.

(e) See upon this statute the Introduction to Lumley's Edition of the Literary and Scientific Institutions Act, 1854.

that from and after the first day of October, 1843, no person or persons shall be assessed or rated, or liable to be assessed or rated, or liable to pay, to any county, borough, parochial, or other local rates or cesses, in respect of any land, houses, or buildings, or parts of houses or buildings, belonging to any society instituted for purposes of science, literature, or fine arts, exclusively, either as tenant or as owner, and occupied by it for the transaction of its business, and for carrying into effect its purposes ;

Provided that such society shall be supported wholly or in part by annual voluntary contributions and shall not, and by its laws may not, make any dividend, gift, division, or bonus in money unto or between any of its members ;

And provided also that such society shall obtain the certificate of the barrister-at-law or lord advocate, as hereinafter mentioned (a).

(a) The statute does not exempt the property itself, but the persons who represent the society, and no means are provided by the Act for the certificate reaching the overseers when it has been granted. Hence, if the society be assessed after the certificate has been obtained, the society should appeal. It is too late to take this objection when the representatives of the society are summoned before the justices for the non-payment of the rate : Reg. v. The Justices of Birmingham, 3 N. S. C. 445 ; 18 L. J. R. M. C. 83 ; 13 Jur. 357 ; 10 Q. B. 868.

An institution for the collection and maintenance of a library of books for the use of the members and of persons who subscribed for the occasion only, is a society for the purpose of literature within this Act : Ib. In this case, however, the library was open to every one who chose to subscribe. In Bradford Library Society v. Bradford Overseers, 1 E. & E. 88 ; 28 L. J. M. C. 73, the number of subscribers was limited, but the building was held to be exempted by this Act.

The Linnæan Society, incorporated for the cultivation of the science of natural history in all its branches, and for the promotion of every kind of improvement in arts and sciences, was admitted to be exempt : Linnæan Society of London v. St. Anne's, Westminster, 23 L. J. R. M. C. 148 ; 18 Jur. 859 ; 3 E. & B. 793.

So also the Zoological Society, incorporated for the advancement of zoology and animal physiology, and the introduction of new and curious subjects of the animal kingdom, was within the description above : Reg. v. The Zoological Society of London, 23 L. J. R. M. C. 139 ; 18 Jur. 786 ; 3 E. & B. 807.

But a society established to promote the education of the labouring classes, by providing a training-school for masters and a model school for poor children, is not exempt, the purpose not being for science or literature : Reg. v. Pocock, 3 N. S. C. 372 ; 10 Jur. 662 ; 15 L. J. R. M. C. 132 ; 8 Q. B., 729. Neither is a society established for the purpose of propagating the Christian religion, by distributing tracts and treatises on religious subjects : Reg. v. Jones, Ib. 382 ; 10 J. P. 531 ; 10 Jur. 613 ; 15 L. J. R. M. C. 129 ; 8 Q. B. 719. Neither is a society established for the elevation of the adult operative population, as it regards their physical, intellectual, moral, and religious condition : Reg. v. St. Martin's in the Fields, 26 L. T. 121 ; 25 L. J. M. C. 42 ; 5 E. & B. 558.

Music is one of the fine arts within this Act : Reg. v. Brandt, ubi infra. The art of war is not, however, within it : Reg. v. Cockburn, ubi infra.

The primary object and purpose must be looked to. Hence, a concert-hall, built and supported by subscription, which was used for the purpose of concerts open to the subscribers and persons admitted by tickets issued to the subscribers, was held not exempt, because the purpose of the society was not exclusively the advancement of the art of music, but also the amusement of the members : Reg. v. Brandt, 3 N. S. C. 494 ; 15 Jur. 223 ; 20 L. J. R. M. C. 119. The amusement and personal benefit of the members of the Zoological Society rendered it not exempt : Reg. v. The Zoological Society of London, ubi supra.

The application of part of the premises, intended as a library or place of science, to the reading of newspapers and other periodical publications of a like nature, prevents the exemption : Reg. v. Gaskell, 16 Q. B. 472 ; 21 L. J. R. M. C. 29 ; 15 Jur. 1156 ; Russell Institution v. St. Giles-in-the-Fields, 18 Jur. 597 ; 23 L. J. R. M. C. 65 ; 3 E. & B. 416 ; Purchas v. Holy Sepulchre, Cambridge, 24 L. J. R. M. C. 9 ; 4 E. & B. 156.

An institution, which comprised a museum of natural history, curiosities, and armour, a library, lecture-room, and rooms for the meetings of the members and council, which was declared to be instituted as a central repository of objects of professional art, science, and natural history, and books and documents relating to those studies (namely, those of war), or containing general information, and the delivery of lectures on appropriate subjects, and whose members were officers in the army or navy, or eminent individuals, benefactors and contributors to the institution, was held not to be exempt: Reg. v. St. Martin-in-the-Fields, 16 Jur. 335; S. C. Reg. v. Sir G. Cockburn, 16 Q. B. 481.

Not only the general purpose of the institution must be for science, literature, and the fine arts exclusively, but the premises must be used for such purpose exclusively. Hence, a building, used principally as a mechanics' institution, but of which the rooms were occasionally let for concerts, lectures, and public meetings, was held to be not exempt, as the whole of the premises was not used exclusively for scientific purposes: Purvis v. Trail, 18 L. J. R. M. C. 57; 3 N. S. C. 459; 3 Exch. Rep. 344. For a like reason, a subscription library, open only to the members of the society, was held not exempt, because a part of the premises was let off to another scientific society: Earl of Clarendon v. St. James, Westminster, 20 L. J. R. M. C. 213; 4 N. S. C. 639; 10 C. B. 806.

If there be a part of the premises let off to other persons, for which they can be assessed, the exemption is not prevented: The Linnæan Society v. St. Anne, Westminster, ubi supra; Reg. v. Brandt, ubi supra. The occupation by the librarian or house-keeper of the institution does not affect the exemption: Id. Neither will the accidental use of the premises for charitable purposes, though profit be gained thereby, prevent it: Reg. v. Brandt.

As to what are voluntary contributions, several cases must be referred to. Thus, where the rules of a society required a payment of two guineas on admission, and an annual sum of 1*l.* in advance for the expenses of the current year, and that the rights and privileges of the members should continue only so long as the subscription was annually paid; it was held, that the society was supported by annual voluntary contributions within the meaning of these words: Reg. v. The Justices of Birmingham, 18 L. J. M. C. 89; 3 N. S. C. 445; 13 Jur. 357; 10 Q. B. 868; 13 J. P. 395; The Linnæan Society v. St. Anne, Westminster; Bradford Library v. Bradford Overseers, ubi supra. The gratuitous distribution of the copies of the printed transactions of the society does not prevent the contributions from being voluntary. But private advantages or conveniences, which result to the member in return for his contribution, though not amounting to pecuniary profit, prevent the same from being voluntary within the meaning of this Act: Reg. v. The Zoological Society of London, ubi supra. See also the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench in The Russell Institution v. St. Giles in the Fields, ubi supra, as to the meaning of the word "contribution."

So also a joint-stock library, held by shareholders, whose shares might increase in value, but where no benefit was to accrue to any one of them, was held to be exempt: Liverpool Library, app., Corporation of Liverpool, resp., 5 Exch. (N. S.) 526; 29 L. J. R. M. C. 229.

2. Provided always and be it enacted, that before any society shall be entitled to the benefit of this Act, such society shall cause three copies of all laws, rules, and regulations for the management thereof, signed by the president or other chief officer and three members of the council or committee of management, and countersigned by the clerk or secretary of such society, to be submitted, in England, Wales, and Berwick-upon-Tweed, to the barrister-at-law for the time being appointed to certify the rules of friendly societies there (a);

Scientific societies to cause three copies of their rules of management to be submitted to the barrister or person appointed to certify the rules of friendly

The existence of this law is a condition precedent to the exemption, and therefore it is not enough that, in fact, the members can derive no benefit from the institution: Reg. v. Phillips, 3 N. S. C. 134; 8 Q. B. 745; 42 Jur. 431; 17 L. J. R. M. C. 83; Reg. v. Jones, ubi supra.

An institution founded for the promotion of literature, the fine arts, and science, was held not deprived of exemption by reason of the following facts:—1. That the trustees had power to let off a part of the premises not required for the use of the institution, for which part no exemption was claimed; 2. That a commission was claimed by the society upon the sale of pictures sold in their rooms, to defray the expenses incidental to the exhibition thereof, but which produced no profit to the society; 3. That the deed of trust provided that the building was to be used inter alia for the diffusion of education and knowledge consistent with the general purposes of the institution; 4. That strangers who entered to see the pictures paid a fee on admission, which was applied to the general purposes of the institution. Lastly, that the deed declared that on a dissolution of the society, the property should be sold, and the proceeds, after payment of the debts, should be divided among its members: Reg. v. Manchester, 4 N. S. C. 483; 15 Jur. 219; 20 L. J. R. M. C. 113; 16 Q. B. 449.

“Purposes of science” means purposes of science in the abstract and not the application of science to professional purposes: Reg. v. Institution of Civil Engineers, L. R. 5 Q. B. D. 48. But see Reg. v. Royal Medical Society, 30 L. T. (o.s.) 133; 21 J. P. 789, whose premises were held to come within the Act.

(a) See sect. 2. Although the certificate of the barrister or lord advocate is required to complete the exemption, it has been decided in various cases, that, whether appealed against or not, it does not conclude parties interested in disputing the exemption, “inasmuch as it does not establish the exemption, but only shows that according to his opinion the society comes

(a) It will be seen that no copy is to be sent to the officers of the parish, whom it concerns more than any other authority.

3. And be it enacted, that if the laws, rules, and regulations of any such society shall be altered, so as to affect or relate to the property or constitution of such society, such alterations shall, within one calendar month after the same shall have been made, be submitted to such barrister or lord advocate, and such barrister or lord advocate shall certify as aforesaid; and such rules, when so certified, shall be filed with the clerk of the peace as aforesaid;

Certain alterations made in the rules to be certified and deposited in like manner.

And in the meantime such society shall be entitled to the benefit of this Act, as if no such alteration had been made;

Which, together with the expense of transmitting the rules to and from the said barrister or lord advocate, shall be defrayed by each society respectively.

6. Provided also, and be it enacted, that any person or persons assessed to any rate from which any society shall be exempted by this Act, may appeal from the decision of the said barrister or lord advocate in granting such certificate as aforesaid to the said court of quarter sessions, within four calendar months next after the first assessment of such rate made after such certificate shall have been filed as aforesaid, or (b) within four calendar months next after the first assessment of such rate made after such exemption shall have been claimed by such society, such appellant first giving to the clerk or secretary of the society in question, twenty-one days previously to the sitting of the said court (c), notice in writing of his intention to

(a) It will be seen that this proceeding is quite ex parte, and probably it cannot be opposed, as the next clause provides for the appeal against the certificate after the same has been filed. Nevertheless, the court may exercise their discretion in the matter, and investigate the application on their own judgment.

(b) This clause gives an alternative of two periods for the appeal, which may be either within the time specified after the filing of the certificate, or within that after the claim of exemption ; Reg. v. Pocock, ubi supra.

(c) These words will doubtless be interpreted as signifying the first day of the sessions. However, the enactment itself is affected

And at such quarter sessions such recorder or justices shall, on its being proved that such notice and statement have been given as aforesaid, proceed to hear such appeal, according to the grounds set forth in such statement, and not otherwise;

And if the certificate of the said barrister or lord advocate shall appear to him or them to have been granted contrary to the provisions of this Act, shall and may annul the same (f), and shall and may, according to their discretion, award such costs to the party appealing or appealed against as he or they shall think proper (g);

(f) There is no provision that the certificate may be confirmed if the court should think proper, because that has already taken place, and the only object of the appeal is to procure its annulment, if possible.

(a) Where the committee of a county lunatic asylum purchased 30 acres of land, which they cultivated, with the assistance of the pauper lunatics, as a garden, and also received into the asylum paupers from other counties and a few private patients, and a considerable profit was annually derived from the asylum, it was held that, notwithstanding, the asylum came within the operation of this enactment and therefore was not assessable on the higher scale: Cambridge Pauper Lunatic Asylum v. Fulbourn, 12 L. T. (N. S.) 344; 34 L. J. M. C. 106; 6 B. & S. 451.

An Act to amend the Law relating to Parochial Assessments in England. [7th Aug., 1862.]

“WHEREAS it is expedient that more effectual provision should be made for securing uniform and correct valuations of parishes in the unions of England:” Be it enacted, by the Queen’s most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

1. The words used in this Act shall be construed in like manner as the words contained in the Act fourth and fifth of King William the Fourth, chapter seventy-six, and the word “Committee” shall signify the Assessment Committee provided for by this Act; and this Act shall be termed “The Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862.” Interpretation.

2. The board of guardians of every union, formed under the Act fourth and fifth years of King William the Fourth, chapter seventy-six, shall, as soon as convenient after the passing of this Act and in every subsequent year, at their first meeting after the annual elections of guardians, appoint from among themselves any number not less than six nor more than twelve to be a committee, consisting partly of ex-officio and partly of elected guardians, to be called the Assessment Committee of the Union, for the investigation and supervision and valuations to be made as hereinafter mentioned within such union, and for the performance of such (said) acts and duties as hereinafter mentioned: Sic. Appointment of the assessment committee by board of guardians.
 Provided always, that one-third at least of such committee shall consist of ex-officio guardians, in case there shall be an adequate number of such ex-officio guardians ; but in case an adequate number of such ex-officio guardians shall not exist, then the number so deficient shall be made up of elected guardians.

Where union has the same bounds as borough, names of assessment committee to be transmitted to town council, who may appoint additional members.

3. [*] Where any union shall have the same bounds as a municipal borough, the clerk to the guardians of such union shall, upon the appointment of the Assessment Committee, if directed by the said guardians to do so, transmit in writing the names of the persons so appointed to the town council of such borough, and such council may thereupon, if they think fit, appoint from themselves a certain number, not exceeding the number appointed by the board of guardians, who shall, until they respectively cease to be members of the town council or decline to act, forthwith form part of the Assessment Committee for such union, and the said council may from time to time supply any vacancies in the number of persons appointed by them.

Provision for neglect to appoint.

4. If the guardians shall neglect or be prevented from making such appointment at the meeting above specified, the Poor Law Board shall, by their order, appoint some other day on which the guardians shall make such appointment.

Provision for vacancies.

5. If any ex-officio or elected guardian being a member of the committee cease to be a guardian, or resign his seat at such committee, or die, or become incapable of acting as such member, the board of guardians shall with all convenient speed appoint an ex-

6. During any vacancy in any assessment committee the other or continuing members of such committee may act, and shall have the same powers and jurisdiction as if no such vacancy had happened. Continuing members may act during vacancies.

7. The authority of the committee appointed for any union under this Act shall extend over every parish comprised in such union. Extent of committee's authority.

8. The committee shall hold their first meeting at the board-room of the union on a day to be fixed by the board of guardians, and the subsequent meetings of the committee shall be holden at such times and at such place and upon such notice and requisition as they shall from time to time appoint; and any guardian of the union may be present at any meeting of the committee, but shall not be entitled to take part in the proceedings thereof. First meeting, when to be holden.

9. All acts, orders, matters, and things by this Act authorized or directed to be made or done by the committee, may be made or done by the major part of the members of such committee who shall be present at a meeting, the whole number present together at such meeting not being less than three, and not less in any case than one-third of the whole number of which such committee consists; and when upon any question there shall be an equality of votes the presiding chairman shall have a second or casting vote. Quorum of meetings.

The committee shall cause a minute of their proceedings, and of the names of the members who attend each meeting, to be duly made from time to time in books to be provided for that purpose, which shall be kept by the clerk, under their superintendence, and every such entry shall be signed by the presiding chairman of the assessment committee present at the meeting at which the proceeding took place; and such entry, purporting to be so signed, shall be received as evidence in all courts, and before all judges, justices, and others, without proof of such meeting having been duly convened or held, or of the persons attending such meeting having been or being members of the committee, or of the signatures of the members, all of which facts shall be presumed until the contrary be proved; and all such books shall at all reasonable times be open to the inspection of every person rated to the relief of the poor in any parish or place in the union, without any fee being demanded for such inspection; and all such persons shall be entitled at all seasonable times to take copies or extracts from the said books without paying any fee for the same, and if, on request made for that purpose, the clerk of the committee refuse to permit any such person to inspect any such books, or to take copies or extracts therefrom, as aforesaid, such clerk shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, upon a summary conviction for the same before two justices of the peace.

[*] It shall be lawful for the court of quarter sessions upon any such appeal, instead of hearing the said appeal, to adjourn the same, and to order, upon the application of the appellant or respondent in such appeal, a survey or valuation of any of the parishes in respect of which such appeal shall be made, and fix the next or some subsequent sessions for receiving such survey or valuation, and for hearing and determining such appeal; and such court shall also thereupon appoint a proper person to make such survey or valuation, and the person so appointed shall have power, with or without assistants, to enter upon and survey, measure, and value all the hereditaments liable to be assessed to the rates for the relief of the poor within the parish or parishes mentioned in such order, and such survey and valuation shall be reported to the quarter sessions on adjournment fixed as aforesaid for receiving the same, and the court then and there assembled shall hear and determine the said appeal in the manner herinbefore set forth.

Be it therefore enacted as follows :—

1. The occupier of any rateable hereditament let to him for a term not exceeding three months shall be entitled to deduct the amount paid by him in respect of any poor rate assessed upon such hereditaments from the rent due or accruing due to the owner, and every such payment shall be a valid discharge of the rent to the extent of the rate so paid. Owners may agree to pay the rate and be allowed a commission.

4. The vestry of any parish may from time to time order that the owners of all rateable hereditaments to which section three of this Act extends, situate within such parish, shall be rated to the poor rate in respect Vestries may order the owner to be rated instead of the occupier.

1. The overseers shall rate the owners instead of the occupiers, and shall allow to them an abatement or deduction of fifteen per centum from the amount of the rate :
2. If the owner of one or more such rateable hereditaments shall give notice to the overseers in writing that he is willing to be rated for any term not being less than one year in respect of all such rateable hereditaments of which he is owner, whether the same be occupied or not, the overseers shall rate such owner accordingly, and allow to him a further abatement or deduction not exceeding fifteen per centum from the amount of the rate during the time he is so rated :
3. The vestry may by resolution rescind any such order after a day to be fixed by them, such day being not less than six months after the passing of such resolution, but the order shall continue in force with respect to all rates made before the date on which the resolution takes effect :

deduct or receive any commission, abatement, or allowance, to which he would, except for such omission or neglect, be entitled under this Act, but shall be liable to pay, and shall pay, such rate or instalment in full.

6. 7. Every payment of a rate by the occupier, notwithstanding the amount thereof may be deducted from his rent as herein provided, and every payment of a rate by the owner, whether he himself is rated instead of the occupier, or has agreed with the occupier or with the overseers to pay such rate, and notwithstanding any allowance or deduction which the overseers are empowered to make from the rate, shall be deemed a payment of the full rate by the occupier for the purpose of any qualification or franchise which, as regards rating, depends upon the payment of the poor rate. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 20.

An Act to amend the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869.

[3rd July, 1882.]

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act shall be called the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, Amendment Act, 1882. Short title.

2. This Act and the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, as amended, shall be read as one Act. Interpretation.
Vict. c. 41.

3. The provisions of the sixteenth section of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, so far as regards the payment of rates by an outgoing occupier, shall extend and apply to any outgoing occupier assessed in the rate, and such outgoing occupier shall only be liable to pay so much of the rate as shall be proportionate to the time of his occupation within the period for which the rate was made, notwithstanding he may not be succeeded in his occupation by an incoming tenant. Payment of rates by outgoing occupier to be proportionate to time of occupation.

This enactment was passed in order to obviate the effect of the decision of the Exchequer Division in the case of the Overseers of the Poor of the Parish of St. Werburgh, Derby, v. Hutchinson (L. R. 5 Ex. D. 19 ; 43 J. P. 785 ; 49 L. J. M. C. 23 ; 42 L. T. (N.S.) 153), in which it was held that the 16th section of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, did not relieve an occupier, who was assessed in a poor rate, but ceased to occupy before the rate had been wholly discharged, from his liability to pay the whole rate, unless there were some tenant who succeeded to the occupation of the hereditament, so as to become liable to pay a proportionate part of the rate. Affirmed by the Court of Appeal in Hare v. Putney Overseers (L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 223 ; 45 L. T. (N.S.) 337.)

4. In a parish in which there is no church or chapel of the parish, a poor rate, whether made before or after the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to have been duly published if, within fourteen days after the making of the rate, notice thereof has been given by affixing Publication of rate where no parish church.

This enactment was also passed to obviate the effect of a decision, viz., that of the Queen's Bench Division in the case of Reg. v. Dyott and others, Justices of Staffordshire (W. N. 1882, p. 84; L. R. 8 Q. B. D. 47; 46 J. P. 324), which decided that a rate not published in the parish was unenforceable, although there was no church or chapel within such parish.

By the Highway Rate Assessment and Expenditure Act, 1882, (45 & 46 Vict. c. 27), it is also enacted as follows :—

The dates in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67, s. 42, are directory and not imperative, and the Acts directed may be validly done at later dates. The court held that upon the true construction of the Act, and keeping in view its object, which was to have one uniform list every five years, it would be impossible to assume that the legislature intended that non-compliance with the provisions of sect. 42 should defeat the valuation list. The court would express no opinion, but it might be that an action would lie against the assessment committee, if, through an intentional act on their part, the right to appeal was destroyed by time: *Reg. v. 2. This Act shall not apply to Scotland and Ireland. Extent of Act.

3. "Whereas by the Act of the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, chapter two, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor,' it is provided that a poor rate shall be raised in every parish by taxation of, amongst other persons, every occupier of certain hereditaments in such parish; and it is expedient to extend the said Act and the Acts amending the same (which Act and Acts are in this Act referred to as the Poor Rate Acts), to hereditaments other than those mentioned in the said Act;" Be it therefore enacted that,—

From and after the commencement of this Act the Poor Rate Acts shall extend to the following hereditaments in like manner as if they were mentioned in the recited Act of the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth; that is to say,

- (1.) To land used for a plantation or a wood or for the growth of saleable underwood, and not subject to any right of common;

- (2.) To rights of fowling, of shooting, of taking or killing game or rabbits, and of fishing when severed from the occupation of the land ; and
- (3.) To mines of every kind not mentioned in the recited Act.

Valuation of land used as plantation.

4. The gross and rateable value of any land used for a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, shall be estimated as follows :—

- (a.) If the land is used only for a plantation or a wood, the value shall be estimated as if the land instead of being a plantation or a wood were let and occupied in its natural and unimproved state :
- (b.) If the land is used for the growth of saleable underwood, the value shall be estimated as if the land were let for that purpose :
- (c.) If the land is used both for a plantation or a wood and for the growth of saleable underwood, the value shall be estimated either as if the land were used only for a plantation or a wood, or as if the land were used only for the growth of the saleable underwood growing thereon, as the assessment committee may determine.

Deduction of rate by tenant of plantation,
&c.

5. Where the rateable value of any land used for a plantation or a wood, or both for a plantation or wood and for the growth of saleable underwood, is increased by reason of the same being estimated in accordance with this Act, the occupier of that land under any lease or agreement made before the commencement of this Act, may, during the continuance of the lease or agreement, deduct from his rent any poor or other local rate, or any portion thereof, which is paid by him in respect of such increase of rateable value, and every assessment committee, on the application of such occupier, shall certify in the valuation list or otherwise the fact and amount of such increase.

6. (1.) Where any right of fowling, or of shooting, or of taking or killing game or rabbits, or of fishing (hereinafter referred to as a right of sporting) is severed from the occupation of the land and is not let, and the owner of such right receives rent for the land, the said right shall not be separately valued or rated, but the gross and rateable value of the land shall be estimated as if the said right were not severed; and in such case if the rateable value is increased by reason of its being so estimated but not otherwise, the occupier of the land may, unless he has specifically contracted to pay such rate in the event of an increase, deduct from his rent such portion of any poor or other local rate as is paid by him in respect of such increase; and every assessment committee, on the application of the occupier, shall certify in the valuation list or otherwise the fact and amount of such increase. Valuation and rating of rights of shooting, &c.
- (2.) Where any right of sporting, when severed from the occupation of the land, is let, either the owner or the lessee thereof, according as the persons making the rate determine, may be rated as the occupier thereof.
- (3.) Subject to the foregoing provisions of this section the owner of any right of sporting, when severed from the occupation of the land, may be rated as the occupier thereof.
- (4.) For the purposes of this section, the person who, if the right of sporting is not let, is entitled to

Gross and rateable value of
and copper
mines.

7. Where a tin, lead, or copper mine is occupied under a lease or leases granted without fine on a reservation wholly or partly of dues or rent, the gross value of the mine shall be taken to be the annual "amount of the whole of the dues" payable in respect thereof during the year ending on the thirty-first day of December preceding the date at which the valuation list is made, in addition to the annual amount of any fixed rent reserved for the same which may not be paid or satisfied by such dues.

The rateable annual value of such mine shall be the same as the gross value thereof, except that where the person receiving the dues or rent is liable for repairs, insurance, or other expenses necessary to maintain the mine in a state to command the annual amount of dues or rent, the average annual cost of the repairs, insurance, and other expenses for which he is so liable shall be deducted from the gross value for the purpose of calculating the rateable value.

1. Where any such mine is occupied under a lease granted wholly or partly on a fine; and
2. Where any such mine is occupied and worked by the owner; and

the gross and rateable annual value of the mine shall be taken to be the annual amount of the dues, or dues and rent, at which the mine might be reasonably expected to let without fine on a lease of the ordinary duration, according to the usage of the country, if the tenant undertook to pay all tenants' rates and taxes and tithe rentcharge, and also the repairs, insurance, and other expenses necessary to maintain the mine in a state to command such annual amount of dues or dues and rent.

The purser, secretary, and chief managing agent for the time being of any tin, lead, or copper mine, or any of them, may, if the overseers or other rating authority think fit, be rated as the occupier thereof.

The term "mine," when a mine is occupied under a lease, includes the underground workings and the engines, machinery, workshops, tramways, and other plant, buildings (not being dwelling-houses), and works and surface of land occupied in connection with and for the purposes of the mine, and situate within the boundaries of the land comprised in the lease or leases under which the dues or dues and rent are payable or reserved :

The term "fine" means fine, premium, or fore-gift, or other payment or consideration in the nature thereof.

Provided that he shall not deduct any sum exceeding what one-half of the rate in the pound of such poor or other local rate would amount to if calculated upon the rent, royalty, or dues so payable by him.

9. Where any occupier, lessee, licensee, grantee, or other person is authorized by this Act to deduct any rate or sum in respect of a rate from any rent, royalty, or dues payable by him, then—

- (1.) Any payment so authorized to be deducted shall be a good discharge for such amount of rent, royalty, or dues as is equal to the amount of such payment, and shall be allowed accordingly.
- (2.) Any payment so authorized to be deducted may be recovered as an ordinary debt from the person to whom the rent, royalty, or dues may be payable.
- (3.) The person receiving the rent, royalty, or dues shall have the same right of appeal and objection with reference to the rate and to the valuation of the hereditament in respect of which the rate is payable as he would have if he were the occupier of such hereditament.

Liability of
rates as well as

10. After the commencement of this Act the hereditaments to which the Poor Rate Acts are extended by this Act, and which are thus made rateable to the relief of the poor, shall be rateable to all local rates in like manner as if the Poor Rate Acts had always extended to such hereditaments.

11. This Act, for the purposes of enabling any hereditament to be included in or omitted from or valued for the purposes of a valuation list or a supplemental or provisional valuation list which will come into force after the 6th day of April, 1875, shall come into operation on the passing thereof, but save as aforesaid, or as is otherwise expressly provided by this Act, shall come into operation on the 6th day of April, 1875; and the expression "commencement of this Act" shall in this Act be construed accordingly. They are to be assessed in respect of the same in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value thereof.

Provided that this repeal shall not affect anything duly done or suffered before the said date, or any right acquired or liability accrued before the said date, or any legal proceeding or remedy in respect of such right or liability, and every such legal proceeding or remedy may be carried on and enforced in like manner as if this repeal had not been enacted.

An Act to amend the Metropolis Management Acts.

WHEREAS by section one hundred and sixty-three of the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, it is provided that any sewers rate raised under that Act shall, as regards all land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only, or as woodland, orchard, market garden, hop, herb, flower, fruit, or nursery ground, be assessed and levied in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value of such land.

And whereas by section one hundred and sixty-four of the same Act it is also provided that where any property was, at the time of the issuing of the first commission under the Act of the eleventh and twelfth years of Her Majesty, chapter one hundred and twelve, entitled to exemption from or to any reduction or allowance in respect of the sewers rate, such exemption, reduction, or allowance shall be observed and allowed in levying any sewers rate under that Act:

And whereas by virtue of the said recited Act, and the Acts amending the same, the Metropolitan Board of Works do assess the several parts of the metropolis according to the basis on which the printed totals of the valuation lists sent out by the clerk of the managers of the metropolitan asylum district under "The Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869," are made, and issue their precepts for sums of money which, by reason of the recited exemptions, cannot be levied upon some of the property included in such assessment, or can only be levied at one-fourth of the amount included in such assessment, whereby the parts of the metropolis wherein such exemptions exist are compelled to make a rate at an increased amount in order to meet such precepts:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal, and Commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

2. The overseers and assessment committees acting under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, shall cause the totals of the gross and rateable value of property so wholly or partially exempt from sewers rate, and the extent of such exemption, to be ascertained and inserted in the valuation lists which will come into force on the sixth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, and in every valuation list which shall thereafter be made by them.

3. The said lists shall be sent by the assessment committees before the first day of November in each year to the clerk of the managers of the metropolitan asylum district, who shall print and send the said totals and extent of exemptions, with the other totals of gross and rateable value required to be printed and sent by the seventeenth section of the said Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869.
